Chimpanzee and Man I Would, if I Dared

PROF. EDDINGTON, able British astronomer, admits that man with his science cannot pretend to penetrate the realms of religion or understand God.

Quite so.

The chimpanzee peers from his jungle home at the strange white man, unable to understand or explain the strange creature that lights and extinguishes fires, and kills at a distance with a loud noise.

Man peers from his earth home through his telescope, photographs another universe, 100,000,000 light years distant, but cannot understand or explain the power that rules space and time.

He finds ease of mind in the word blessed "Relativity," but he cannot explain anything. All that he can do is describe, guess and deny. However, it is his right to investigate and TRY. He is far above the chimpanzee. Thanks to evolution.

He may some day be as far above his present self. Even then he will not know much.

New York's Federal Reserve could not quite make up its mind to raise the discount rate to 6 per cent yesterday.

Some real bankers might be persuaded to replace some of the small financial fish on that Reserve Board. A financial system that in prosperous times compels business to pay 15 per cent one day and 6 per cent the next is pitifully incompetent. Some of our financial geniuses should be sent to study methods of the Bank of France.

Its discount rate yesterday was 2½ per cent, and money for borrowers was abundant at 4 per cent.

What is the matter with our geniuses?

A French monoplane planned yesterday to start a New York to Paris flight and the world is only mildly interested. Flying across the Atlantic is an old story.

Crowds in New York watched a giant bombing plane taking fuel supply at flight, its separate times, from smaller planes. A broadcaster in the machine talked the details to the crowd below.

At Old Orchard, a French Belianca plane is ready for a nonstop flight to Rome.

Above Ft. Worth, Tex., a plane has been flying five days, taking fuel in flight.

At 200 miles an hour, which will soon be slow flying speed, that plane, in the five days, could have flown around the earth.

The three greatest industrial powers in America, General Motors, Ford and the National City Bank, are friendly rivals in airplane building. The real flying days are not far away.

At 14 Wall street an able board of directors will manage a fire insurance company, created by the Protestant Episcopal Church to protect its churches and other combustible property.

The Senate voted to confirm Lenroot as judge, and being ashamed of the job, did it in secret. As usual, some senator told some reporter how the senators voted. Now senators, ashamed AND angry, would oust news agencies from the Senate floor. That would mean ousting the people for, after all, it is the people's Senate. They elect the members and pay their salaries.

Why not abolish secret sessions and secret voting, except in matters involving this nation's relations with other countries? The Senate jails Sinclair for keeping information from senators. What right have senators to keep from the people knowledge of their own public business?

When Mussolini wants to protect Italian wheat growers, he protects them, and does not try to do it by raising the tariff on window glass.

Yesterday Italy increased the tariff on wheat to fourteen lire, gold, about $2.50.

Legislation will regulate, as it does in France, the price that workers pay for bread.

Over there they take workers as seriously as we take dividends.

Girl Begs in Court to Wed Convict

ORDER SEALED VERDICT BY CANTER CASE JURY

LOVE CODE BARED IN TRIAL

A secret code, which she charged her husband used to write letters to a mysterious "Velma," was exhibited in Middlesex Probate Court today by Mary E. Prouty of Broadway, Cambridge.

She is seeking a divorce from Kenneth C. Prouty on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

After hearing the evidence Judge Arthur E. Beane said that while Mrs. Prouty had sufficient grounds for divorce the testimony offered did not support the charge of cruelty and dismissed the case without prejudice.

Mrs. Prouty, who is 29 and the mother of a seven-year-old daughter, said that when she confronted her husband with the code he struck her and knocked her down.

She also produced what she testified was a copy of a letter she found in her husband's pocket addressed to "My darling Velma," in which he begged forgiveness for not telling her he was married before he became engaged to his "code" sweetheart. The letter was signed "Heartbroken and sorrowful," Mrs. Prouty said.

A 28-page letter alleged to have been written by Velma to Mr. Prouty was also placed in evidence.

Allen Gets In to 'L' Fight

Governor Allen took a hand in the badly muddled Elevated situation today when he lunched and conferred with four influential legislative leaders at the Algonquin Club.

The Governor had as his luncheon guests President Bacon of the Senate, Speaker Saltonstall of the House, Chairman Henry L. Shattuck of the House ways and means committee and Representative Elliot Wadsworth of Boston.

Representative Shattuck, having spotted serious flaws in the proposed plans for extension of public control, is now a public ownership advocate, while Representative Wadsworth is the leader of those desirous of seeing the road returned to private ownership.

The House rejected the public control extension bill which the Senate passed, and also voted against both public ownership and return to private hands.

This leaves the whole question in the same position it has been

MOTION TO ACQUIT IS DENIED

Following Judge Raymond's charge, to which counsel for the defense took exception, the case of Harry J. Canter, of East Boston, accused of criminally defaming former Governor Alvan T. Fuller by carrying a placard terming him the "murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti," was given to the jury in Suffolk court at 12:40 p. m. today.

A sealed verdict was ordered by the judge when no decision had been reached by the jury at 3 p. m. The case continued without the presence of former Governor Fuller, who was not called.

LADY ASTOR IN HOT CAMPAIGN

London, May 24 (AP)—A dispatch to the Daily Express from Plymouth said Lady Astor, American-born peeress, probably would retain her seat in the House of Commons from the Sutton division constituency, but her Liberal and Socialist opponents were giving her a race.

Lady Astor has had a number of tilts with the Socialists and those identified with the liquor interests, the dispatch said, citing one instance when Lord Astor came upon his wife surrounded by a group of workmen, one of whom, six feet tall, was standing holding a Labor poster over her head. She snatched it from him and tore it into bits.

COURT IS THRONGED AS CANTER 'DEFAMING CASE' COMES TO AN END

'DEFAMER' CASE GOES TO JURY

lowed an appeal by Arthur Garfield Hays that the jury forget prejudices, disregard the "dynamite" that always has been associated with the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and return a verdict of not guilty.

Judge Raymond told the jury:

"Somebody has said that Fuller was Governor. We don't care whether Fuller was a Governor, a President or a hog-reeve. You are trying Canter on what he said on that placard. Don't get away from that.

"It is not a question of what Canter meant by the term 'murderer,' but what he said and what the words on the placard mean. That term 'murderer' has a meaning in the minds of ordinary men.

"If there is a clear, definite understanding of the term on the part of the people, it is for you to give that meaning to the word here.

"What does the ordinary man believe it means? It is to be interpreted by you in the plain, ordinary sense. It is not a question of what Canter intended if he published to the world this expression, but what the world understands it to mean that is important.

"What is the general tendency of an act like that? It was against the law if it was false and if it was done maliciously and the term had a tendency to a breach of the peace—something that might have stirred up a riot or insurrection.

"What do you say was the tendency of that sort of publication at that time and place?

"If you do not apply this law mistakenly either to me as a governor or the humblest citizen, you are not fit for your places as jurors. You are not fit for your very important duty as jurors if you do not judge this case on its merits."

Before argument Hays moved for a directed finding of not guilty, which immediately was denied.

In his argument defense counsel declared:

"You are not going to send a man to jail for expression of opinion. No intelligent man could possibly conclude the conditions that Canter intended 'murderer' to mean he believed Fuller had actually slain Sacco and Vanzetti."

ASKS GUILTY VERDICT

In asking for a verdict of guilty, Asst. Dist. Atty. Daniel Gilles said the placard was "an orgy of slander as was ever perpetrated on any president of Massachusetts.

"Shall the word be cut from this courtroom that persons can stand on street corners, grossly slander the Governor of the Commonwealth and then come in here and say, 'We didn't mean that; it was a joke.' That's what this defence amounts to.

"I know many men have opinions pro and con on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, but I know you will not let those opinions sway your judgment as they have nothing to do with this case.

"What is the ordinary meaning of the word 'murderer' which was on this placard? When Canter was asked what he meant by the word he replied, 'You see what it says.' This is criminal slander because of its tendency to provoke acts of violence. Why didn't Canter bear a banner containing his thoughts on that day. If there was nothing in the placard about 'moral responsibility'? Not a thing.

"Don't get into a discussion of the Sacco-Vanzetti case when you go into your jury room as it has nothing to do with the charge in this case. Shall it be said that a man elected to high office can be defamed and called a murderer because he does his duty as he sees it? I don't think so."

With the jury still excluded from the room, Judge Raymond heard and excluded from evidence two offers of proof made by counsel for Canter.

They concerned conversations purporting to have been held between the then Governor and Gardner Jackson in one instance and the then Governor and Herbert B. Ehrman in another.

Hays also made an offer of proof that if former Gov. Fuller had been present he would have testified to conversations which he had regarding the Sacco case.

Denials of all offers were made by Judge Raymond before the jury was again admitted to the courtroom.

'L' MAY GO BACK TO OWNERS

for the last few years and Gov. Allen is known to be greatly disappointed at the failure of the lawmakers to settle the issue.

The Governor may send a message to the Legislature, it was said at the State House today, and, if he does, it is believed he will recommend extension of public control in some form, for he has always adhered to that form of solution.

Under present conditions, however, there is no certainty that his words would induce the solons to get together and decide one way or the other.

Meanwhile, over the week-end the advocates of private ownership hope to be able to round up enough votes to put their plan over on Monday. They set out by only seven votes yesterday.

It has been assured that a motion to reconsider action on the extension of public control will be in order as the initial move Monday. When that has been acted on other motions would be in order, provided extension does not win.

When informed of the defeat of EI bills, the governor said:

"The action of the House in rejecting all pending legislation dealing with the Elevated problem is, of course, very disappointing to me, as it must be to all who desire to have this mooted question settled. Beyond this I have no further comment to make at this time."

Probably the greatest surprise in the whole proceedings was the result of the vote taken on the substitute bill offered by Rep. Wadsworth to serve notice on the road terminating public control in 1932.

The vote on roll call was 103 to 116. The unexpected closeness of this vote was taken by leaders of the public ownership movement to mean that an active lobby had been working secretly in the interest of private ownership. Charges were made that the House leaders had double-crossed the upper branch in failing to concentrate on the 10-year extension bill.

2 PLANES' SEA RACE HELD UP

By ARTHUR QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Old Orchard Beach, Me., May 24—The crews of two rival planes, the French Yellow Bird and the American Green Flash, were waiting impatiently today for reports of favorable weather conditions to start an air race across the Atlantic.

The big French Bernard 191 is bound for Paris, while the Yankee Bellanca is scheduled for Rome, with the same course to be pursued by both ships for most of the distance.

The crews of both planes have requested the protection of the coastguard in the first hour of flight, and the Frenchmen asked that the coastguard boats keep in radio communication with them.

Late weather reports were none too favorable and dawn found both planes still shrouded in canvas and still deserted except for police guards and a scattering of sleep-scorning sightseers.

Close friends of the American fliers, Roger Q. Williams and Lewis A. Yancey, were confident the Green Flash would not attempt a getaway before tomorrow morning.

Although mystery surrounded the plans of the airmen from France, tell-tale evidence indicated that the Yellow Bird's crew were bent on an early start, mid-ocean storms or no mid-ocean storms.

Jean Assolent and Rene LeFevre of the French trio did no celebrating last night after their flight here from Roosevelt Field, N. Y. Having seen that their ship was safely taken care of, they ate a frugal supper and went to bed before 8 o'clock.

They left definite orders for the Yellow Bird to be refuelled immediately and fitted with new motors.

From all that could be learned, "all set" well described the French plane and its personnel. Armand Lotti, Jr., third man of the Yellow Bird's crew, arrived early today by train from New York. He, like his two associates, had an air of tension about him.

The weather, of course, will hold the French fliers up indefinitely as it has the Yanks of the Green Flash.

Crowds began drifting early to the beach where the two monoplanes are moored. The Green Flash was in its hangar, but the Yellow Bird, much larger, was unsheltered save by canvas.

It was understood that both crews would await 10 p. m. meteorological report before deciding on a tentative time of departure.

The Americans had not entered their ship fuelled for the flight. Experts said, however, that all necessary work could be done within an hour.

BOATS ALONG ROUTE

Government agencies were prepared to guard the safety of the transatlantic fliers in every possible way. The U. S. Coast Guard has made elaborate arrangements to watch the course of the European-bound planes, to keep the mainland informed of their progress and to affect rescues if necessary.

An amphibian Coast Guard plane, commanded by Lieut. Leonard M. Melka, was ready to accompany the Green Flash on the first few hours of its journey.

BRUSH SETTLES OIL SUITS FOR $300,000

Matthew C. Brush, of New York, formerly president of the Boston Elevated, admits he has received a settlement of $300,000 of his suits against Arthur H. Ballard, E. Constance Ballard and Reginald C. Heath, Ballard Oil Burning Equipment Co. and the Arthur H. Ballard, Inc.

The settlement took the form of a sale by Mr. Brush and a purchase by the defendants of all the stockholdings in the Ballard Oil Burning Equipment Co. Decrees agreed upon by counsel today and were presented to Judge Bishop in the equity session of the Suffolk Superior court.

Mr. Brush sued as a minority stockholder, claiming Arthur Ballard and Reginald C. Heath had improperly taken a large sum of money from the equipment company by forming a new corporation called Arthur H. Ballard, Inc., which engaged in the same line of business as that of the equipment company, and took over all of the business of the latter concern, but it was claimed allowed the equipment company to pay all expenses and salaries.

The case was heard in the first instance by District Attorney Charles Rugg as special master.

John P. Feeney appeared with Gaston Alpert as counsel for Mr. Brush and Holmes and Worthen appeared for the respondents.

MEXICANS KILL 1, HURT 3 IN RIOT

Mexico City, May 24 (AP)—One student was killed and 32 persons were wounded, four of them seriously, in a series of highly dramatic riots early today, growing out of the strike of students at the National University law school in protest at monthly examinations.

Police and firemen adopted extreme measures in breaking up the crowds of striking students and their sympathizers. The police fired into crowds, and firemen wielded their axes and also played their hose upon them.

At one place, the National University Medical School, the conflict was a veritable battle.

Police roused 23 of the student strike leaders from their beds and arrested them, pending investigation of their responsibility for the riots. It was after midnight before the crowds of several thousand students were dispersed.

While all of this was going on, Ricardo Villalobos, president of the Association of Law Students, went to the home of Dr. Manuel Puig Casauranc, chief of the Federal district government and begged him to intervene. Dr. Puig Casauranc rushed to the scene, and, ordering the police to cease firing, he entered the building and induced the students to leave in an orderly manner.

His emotional speech so moved the students they lifted him to their shoulders and carried him from the building, shouting their enthusiasm. Dr. Puig Casauranc immediately drove to Chapultepec Castle and went into conference with President Portes Gil.

Aboard Graf Zeppelin, May 24 (Via Radio to Norddeich)—This was one time I did not have to change my mind. I had it made up all the time to fly back to Friedrichshafen with the Graf Zeppelin so as to be ready in case they are soon to go to America.

I was somewhat uneasy since we landed at Cuero about being able to wait long enough for the repairs to be made, but I am glad that everything is all right now, and I would not have missed this trip for anything.

In this first dispatch I am sending from the Graf Zeppelin on its homeward flight I must tell about the excitement aboard. Here we are a little over an hour away from the French havan where the good airship was anchored for nearly a week. It is now 9:30 and we are 700 meters above light-garlanded Marseille and having a most enjoyable party.

It is a real sensation to be sailing along in the moonlight way up over the beautiful old French city, and having our supper.

We are eating hot dogs and drinking wine.

The Polish aviators hope to reach Chicago by way of Dublin some time next month.

GIRL BEGS TO WED CONVICT

the girl, mother of a three-months-old boy, might marry Andrew Mackiewicz of Everett, the prisoner, if she arrived at the prison with her marriage license before closing time.

The couple applied for a license May 16 and it was granted at the expiration of the required five days. Meanwhile, however, the Everett youth had been arrested for violation of parole.

The girl created a stir in East Cambridge court when she begged permission to marry Mackiewicz.

After a conference of judges it was decided that Mackiewicz had already been transferred into the jurisdiction of the parole board or prison authorities and it was for them to decide whether to permit the marriage.

It developed that Mackiewicz was on parole when he and Miss Ladzatta applied for a marriage license at Cambridge City Hall on May 15.

at Cambridge City Hall on May 16. But while they were waiting for the required five days to expire, Mackiewicz was arrested in Cambridge, on May 20, for drunkenness, operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and driving so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

GIRL HAS LICENSE.

With the prospective bridegroom locked up awaiting a hearing, the wedding could not well take place, and when he was arraigned before Judge Robert Walcott today the court was informed it had been discovered he was a paroled convict.

Judge Walcott placed the charges on file and instructed the court clerk to notify the State parole board to have Mackiewicz sent back to State Prison, in conformity with the law governing parolees.

Everything appeared to be settled when Miss Ladzatta suddenly appeared and, evidently in a state of high excitement, produced the marriage license, which she had obtained at Cambridge City Hall when the five-day period expired.

TO SEE PRISON HEADS.

She told Judge Wolcott she wanted to marry the prisoner right away before he should be taken back to prison and she said she could get a Polish priest to perform the ceremony within a few minutes, if the court would agree.

The girl left court to try to get aid in carrying out her wish to marry Mackiewicz.

GERMANS FLAY 'TRICKERY' IN DEBT PLAN

Berlin, May 24 (INS)—How the allied reparation experts at Paris accepted the Young plan "in principle" and, at the same time, added 2,325,000,000 marks to it, was revealed today by analysis of the allied payment plan which has just been received here.

German denounce the allied experts' revisions of the original Young plan as a "dishonest juggler's trick," asserting that the allied delegates in Paris had proceeded upon the principle of "now you see it, now you don't."

The "trick," according to Germans who have studied the revised plan, was very simple.

It was pointed out that, under the latest proposal of the allies, Germany continues to pay the Dawes plan annuity of 2,500,000,000 marks until December 31, 1929. In addition, retroactively, beginning April 1, 1929, Germany also pays the new Young plan annuity at the rate of 1,975,000,000 marks.

The overlapping of the Dawes plan and Young plan annuities for nine months increases German payments during the first year's operation of the Young plan by 1,875,000,000 marks just at a time when Germany is urgently seeking financial relief.

Rescuer Drowns as South Fights Flood

Memphis, Tenn., May 24 (AP)—The high water in the Mississippi river and its tributaries took the season's first recorded flood death last night. Raymond Joya, 28, a plantation foreman, was drowned in Red River near Texarkania, Ark., while trying to rescue horses. In that vicinity about 4000 acres were under water.

Missing Wife and 2 Sons Sought in Boston

Frederick A. Boykin of 565 West One Hundred Sixtieth st, New York City, having failed in exhaustive searches in and about New York to locate his wife and two children who mysteriously disappeared Dec. 11 of last year, now appeals to police to aid him in a search here for the missing trio.

The wife whose maiden name was Esther McGregor Forbes, a native of Scotland, is 31. The children, two boys, she took with her, are Frederick A. Boykin, Jr., almost 10, and Ralph A. Boykin, 5.

On the morning of Dec. 11, Mr. Boykin kissed his wife and children goodbye as he left home for work. He had instructed his wife to draw $1000 from one bank and deposit it in another. She drew the money out, but did not deposit again. When he came home that night he found a note which read:

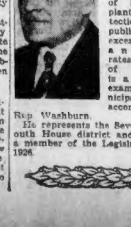
LEGISLATIVE HONOR ROLL

REP. HAROLD H. WASHBURN of Middleboro, a Republican, favors the light and power bill to remove serious barriers in the way of municipal ownership of lighting plants and protection to the public against excessive light and power rates. The town of Middleboro is a successful example of municipal lighting, according to Rep. Washburn. He represents the Seventh Plymouth House district and has been a member of the Legislature since 1926.



REP. LAWRENCE T. WOOLFENDEN of New Bedford, a Republican, favors the municipal light and power bill as a means of protecting cities and towns from the Power Trust. He is native of Avon and has been active in town affairs for many years, being a member of the Water Commission of the town.

Veterans' Bureau Will Be Open Tonight

Washington, May 24—Although the administration's new oil conservation policy has been challenged as unconstitutional, President Hoover today seemed likely to receive early indorsement from the Senate on his order terminating oil development in the public domain.

The constitutionality of the President's order will be upheld by a Senate judiciary subcommittee which has just concluded an inquiry into its constitutional aspects, and its decision by the committee undoubtedly will be ratified by the Senate judiciary committee. The final decision, though, will be given by the Senate itself.

The sub-committee will report Monday that the President had ample authority to halt public drilling.

This decision, however, will clash with the opinion of such constitutional lawyers as King and Walsh. The President's action has had the economic approval of numerous senators, from both parties, and it was challenged only on legal grounds.

NEW BANK CLUE IN STREET DEAL

ing back over a period of nine years.

It is understood this examination concerned appraisals made on property purchased by the city in recent years, with the purpose of making a comparison with methods used in the Exchange st. deal.

Both E. Keck and John C. Kiley were in conference with the two assistant district attorneys later in the day.

Mr. Kiley is a real estate dealer, participating in downtown developments for more than 25 years. He is said to have declined to act as a special appraiser for the city at the time of the Exchange st. land taking.

Several Boston banks which have been asked to provide the district attorney's assistants with transcripts of bank accounts of certain persons, for study in connection with the Exchange st. investigation, have been instructed to cover a period beginning January 1, 1927.

The City Council committee on finance was due to take up for consideration today a new loan for $350,000 for further land-takings on Exchange st., but before the loan be drawn up by the committee in place of the mayor's loan order for $300,000, which was rejected.

DEAD MAN'S STUBS MAKE HIM THIEF

Burlington, Vt., May 24—After a career of honor as city treasurer here 34 years, it was indicated today, a week after the death of L. C. Grant, that between the years 1914-1919 he may have misappropriated $6584 of the city's money.

After his death assessment bank stubs were found in his clothing. Mayor J. Holmes Jackson became suspicious and ordered an investigation. Auditors went over his accounts despite the fact he retired as city treasurer in 1919. The auditors found Grant had collected assessments from citizens, had failed to enter the sums in the city books and without doubt made the city's money his own to use.

The student had given no intimation of any intention to quit the academy. He was not missed until 6 p. m.

COURTHOUSE BILL AMENDED BY SENATE

The Senate today, over the objection of Mayor Nichols, amended the bill authorizing $4,000,000 to be spent for land and an addition to the Suffolk county court house.

Under the amendment, the three members of the commission on building and land taking would be named by the Governor, the mayor, and the chief justice of the supreme court. Mayor Nichols, before the amendment, provided that the governor and mayor would appoint one each, the third to be selected by the first two.

Senator Parkman, Jr., of Boston, opposed to the amendment, declared that 80 per cent of the cost is to be paid by Boston. The original makeup of the committee he argued was much more fair.

Senator Fish, for the amendment, pointed out that the third man to be appointed by the chief justice must be a resident of Boston.

A representative of Mayor Nichols, who gave the mayor's views to the senate committee, predicted that the Mayor will veto the amended bill, if it comes to him in that form.

MAYOR QUINN TO PROBE PLAN BOARD FIASCO

In an effort to reach an agreement with the Cambridge planning board, whose resignations have been tendered to Mayor Quinn, the chief executive personally will investigate the many projects which the board claims were ignored by city officials.

This was the only result achieved by the conference held yesterday with the mayor and three members of the planning board.

The mayor let it be known that he is not willing at this time to act on the resignations.

He stated that he has requested them to forward to him all of the projects sponsored by the board, and which it is said, were not acted on one way or another by the City Council.

Having received this information from the planning board members, the mayor declared that he would review the projects and if possible promote some action on them.

"In the majority of cases," the mayor asserted, "action was not taken on recommendations set forth by the board because the city was not financially able to sponsor them."

ARMISTICE MAY PUT HOLE WAR TO END TODAY

Today's official communique from the battle front in the Dorchester sector, where women residents of Oakton ave. are in the trenches to prevent the telephone company from erecting poles instead of laying cables, was:

"All was quiet along the Oakton ave. front durmg the last 12 hours, only one false alarm of an attack by the 'enemy' being reported.

"A squad of four on the watch for a move by telephone workers rushed to the scene at the alarm, but returned to their listening posts when they learned that all was well."

Shortly after 4 o'clock the watchers rushed from their homes when a truck with several men on it drove up to the "front" and stopped. Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick and Miss Mary F. MacPherson and two other embattled residents dashed from their homes to the attack, but when they reached their objective they discovered the truck was not manned by the enemy, but held only a few early morning sightseers, who fled at the approach.

City Councillor Albert Fish, who represents the Dorchester district of which Oakton ave. is a part, telephoned Mrs. Fitzpatrick today and told her he intended interviewing telephone officials in an effort to have the wires placed underground.

Rumors that peace would be signed today were heard all through the sector. Atty. James O'Connell, who is acting as adjutant-general for the defending forces, announced that he expects the telephone company to capitulate during the day, as it had showed signs of weakening when it resurveyed the street with the object of determining the cost of laying underground cables. If the company agrees to lay the cables the war will be over.

Radio and Ear Shirley Musician's Only Tutors

Shirley, May 24—This town boasts of a competent and much in demand musician who has never taken a music lesson and who cannot read a note of sheet music.

Frank Harvard is the man, but he is more popularly known as "Jassbo," because of the tuneful and peppy music which he evokes from his violin. Harvard's musical education consists of close attention to programs broadcast over the radio and to the melodies produced on phonograph records.

His method of self-instruction consists of listening closely to the produced melodies and of retaining the airs, which he then reproduces on his violin. He has been playing the violin for 12 years, and is only in his early 20s.

Harvard is particularly proud of his talent and plays at many public and social functions. He keeps up the minute-to-minute interest song hits by use of the radio. His musical memory is amazing, for once having heard a piece he can reproduce it flawlessly.

TUNNEY'S WIFE WORSE; FIGHTS AGAINST DEATH

London, May 24 (AP)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from the island of Brioni, in the Adriatic, says that the condition of Mrs Gene Tunney, who recently underwent an operation, was stated to have grown worse, but not to be desperate.

The former heavyweight champion was said to have grown alarmed at an increase in the temperature of Mrs. Tunney and had called Dr. Cadro from Rovigno. The doctor had not yet arrived today.

Divorcee to Push Case Despite Lack of Affidavit

New Haven, May 24—The contention that Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty was ignorant of the nature of a paper she signed which later developed to be an affidavit clearing Gene Tunney of any obligation to her was made today by her counsel, Col. Lewis L. Field.

The lawyer viewed existence of that affidavit, allegedly signed in July, 1928, as no bar to vigorous prosecution of the divorcee's suit for $500,000 against Tunney on grounds of breach of promise.

Col. Field said he will insist on taking his case before a jury. There has been, he said, no talk of settlement.

"Mrs. Fogarty, I believe, has sound legal grounds for this suit. That's why I took the case, and I have been investigating it for three or four months," said Col. Field.

Col. Field said Billy Gibson, former manager for Tunney, had received "some letters" from Mrs. Fogarty, but intimated Tunney did not negotiate for their return himself. Asked if it were true that Mrs. Fogarty had been paid $75,000 for the letters, he replied: "The sum is incorrect."

Mrs. Fogarty Silent on Gene's "$75,000 Payment"

New York, May 24 (INS)—Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty today expressed chagrin at published reports from Brioni, Italy, that Gene Tunney "could not remember her."

GLUECK URGES STUDY OF BOY PROBLEM

The case of Carl Newton Mahan, six, Kentucky boy sentenced to 15 years in a reform school for shooting a playmate to death, should teach a vital lesson, Sheldon Glueck, assistant professor of criminology at Harvard Law School, said today.

He said such cases will call attention to the fact that treatment of juvenile delinquency is not what it should be.

His counsel having demanded a jury trial, the boy was found guilty of killing Cecil Van Hoose following an altercation over a piece of scrap iron the two sought to sell to a junk dealer in Paintsville, Ky.

"It takes the unusual, striking case, or some great public disaster, to call our attention to weaknesses in the creaking machinery of society," said Prof. Glueck. "The devastating explosion in Cleveland, for example, was not, in a sense, an unmixed evil; it has started a movement throughout the country for the careful examination of the storing of inflammable or explosive materials in hospitals.

SHOULD HEED LESSON

"So cases such as this in Kentucky will call the attention of forward-looking citizens and legislators throughout the country to the fact that our treatment of juvenile delinquency is far from the standard set by the committee of experts on juvenile delinquency that met in Washington a few years ago under auspices of the Federal Children's Bureau.

"Cases such as this also emphasize the great social good that might be brought about by child-guidance and habit clinics such as we have in Massachusetts. The tragedy is that we so often wait for calamities to occur before we do something about improving the social situation."

The law permitting the sentencing of the child was characterized as "inhuman and unjust" by Judge Michael J. Murray of Central District Court.

Speaking from an experience of 25 years, Judge Murray declared that in his opinion penal institutions do not reform, and the boy's life would be ruined while the public probably would not be protected.

Convicted Slayer, 6, Home With Dad Pending Appeal

Paintsville, Ky., May 24 (AP)—Six-year-old Carl Newton Mahan was in his father's home today pending action of persons concerned themselves with the legality of the court proceedings which culminated in the imposition of a 15-year sentence on the boy.

A jury found the boy guilty of manslaughter and decided, in so doing, that he knew it was wrong to kill, and a judge had sentenced him to imprisonment in a reform school until he becomes of age, he was then permitted to go home with his parents, to remain with them until his case is passed on finally.

Attorneys who represented the boy planned to raise several legal points in an appeal, one contention being that there is no provision in law for the sentencing of a person under 7 years old.

Carl killed eight-year-old Cecil Vanhoose after the boys had quarreled over a piece of iron which they thought might bring a few pennies from a junk dealer.

In the cross-examination of the hospital superintendent, John Ryan, who had testified at earlier hearings that Streechon was "unqualified as a cook," it was brought out that several kitchen employes had been discharged at the hospital on reports by Streechon that their services were unsatisfactory.

The city's case was concluded by testimony of three employes who said they had been made ill by food.

According to earlier testimony in the hearing, Streechon denied that his meat loaf gravy had caused any illness, but that "it was the rotten meat."

The Germantown Citizens' Association, which is waging the fight to secure better street lights, is headed by Arthur L. Stanek. Mr. Stanek says that it is time the city took cognizance of the fact that Germantown is a part of Boston and deserves modern street lighting as well as modern sewerage and better roads.

Stanek had the sign erected on the corner of the two streets because three persons were killed there by a trolley car last October and a week before another man was killed a block distant.

It is alleged by the Citizens' Association that 12 persons were killed on the street within the past year.

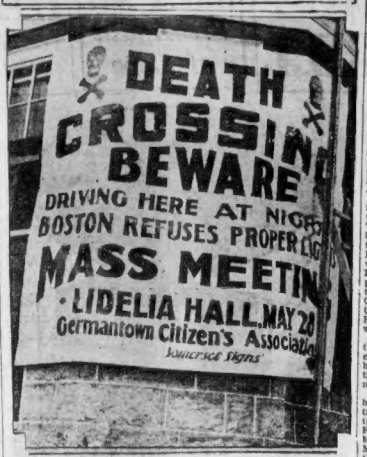
SPEAKS FOR ITSELF



This sign was placed today on a house at Washington st. and Washington Heights ave., West Roxbury, by the Germantown Citizens' Association in the campaign for better lighting on Washington st. from Lagrange st. to the Dedham line. (Staff photo.)

REBUKE MAYOR IN BATHHOUSE CASE

Mayor McGrath of Quincy, who denounced the police department for failure to arrest those responsible for wrecking the ward 2 bathhouse, was mildly rebuked himself today in the same connection.

Thirteen small boys were in juvenile court, charged with damaging the property and Judge Nash had sent for the Mayor to estimate the damage.

Mayor McGrath did not appear at the session and Judge Nash said that "in view of lack of interest on the part of the city" he would not ask the boys to make restitution. They were placed on probation for six months.

STATE FISH CHIEF BILL APPROVED

LUNCHEON ENDS UNITARIAN SESSIONS

A luncheon given by the Tuckerman School Association, followed this afternoon by the 33d annual meeting of the Young People's Religious Union at the First Parish Church, Cambridge, featured the fifth and last business day exercises of the anniversary week program of the American Unitarian Association.

The Tuckerman school luncheon, followed by speaking, was held in the Hale chapel on Marlboro st. The presidents of the various alliances in the country were in attendance. The speakers today were Prof. Kirsott Lake, D. D., of Harvard; Dr. Berkeley B. Blake of Berkeley, Cal., administrative vice-president of the American Unitarian Association; Miss Clara T. Guild; Dean Harriet E. Johnson of the Tuckerman school, and Mrs. H. B. Hartwell, who graduated this week.

At this afternoon's meeting of the Young People's Religious Association officers for the year will be chosen. There is keen competition for the various officers in the national organization.

Although today was the final business meeting of the association, there will be an all-day picnic tomorrow of the Greater Boston Federation of the Y. P. R. U., to be held at Cedar Hill, Waltham. Miss Betty Muther is chairman of the committee in charge.

BROWN SENIORS GIVE OWN 'LOW DOWN'

Providence, May 24—The favorite pastime of Brown University seniors is sleeping and the favorite drink is water, according to results of the annual questionnaire submitted to the students.

As to matrimony, 81 seniors would marry for money, but 100 said they would not consider the bonds on those terms.

And nearly the entire class admitted that they confidently expect to be earning at least $5000 a year by the time they have been five years out of college.

The most popular man in the class is John S. Collier, president of the Cammarian club and star hurdler, while Al Cornsweet is voted the best athlete.

Howard Franklin Eastwood of Providence won the lead as handsomest man, with second honors going to Harold M. Cole of Montclair, N. J.

The class grind was decided to be Chester C. Greene, Jr., of Providence, the best mixer and best dressed man, Everett Eynon of Washington, D. C., and the leader in social graces, Harold M. Cole.

PASTOR JURORS FREE WOMAN

Beatrice, Neb., May 24 (AP)—A widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Wright, who had been convicted in police court of sale and possession of liquor, has been freed by a district court jury, two members of which were ministers.

The jury voted acquittal although the defense made no effort to refute police testimony that a little less than a pint of liquor was found in Mrs. Wright's flat. The case had been appealed after Mrs. Wright had been sentenced to pay a $100 fine or serve 60 days in jail.

Britain Allays Fear of Smallpox; Puts Blame on Ship

London, May 24 (AP)—The British Ministry of Health today issued a statement to dispel the smallpox scare which has alarmed steamship and travel agencies and lately caused international complications between England and France.

Smallpox of a mild character has been more than usually prevalent in England and Wales since 1922, the statement said.

But the severe type of the disease was brought from the East by the steamship Tuscania, which arrived in England from Bombay in March. Fifty-one cases of infection developed and there were ten deaths.

GOOD TO POISON PEN EVA

Fears of a reformatory sentence which caused 15-year-old Eva Libertine of Braintree to attempt suicide, were almost dissipated in Quincy court today when Judge Nash continued for six months the charge that she sent "poison pen" letters to Mrs. George J. Jessup of East Braintree.

Receipt of notes by three persons who were witnesses at the trial which resulted in her father being sent to jail for arson, resulted in the arrest of the girl.

Last Saturday as the date neared for her appearance in court the girl attempted suicide by inhaling illuminating gas.

FORD, WHO HIT AT JEWS, NOW LAUDS THEM

New York, May 24 (AP)—Henry Ford, who two years ago made public apology for attacks on Jews in his Dearborn Independent, has issued a statement praising the race for its benevolence and philanthropy.

The statement was a tribute to the guest of honor when Mr. Ford sat down with 2000 Jews at a testimonial dinner to David A. Brown, Jewish philanthropist.

Mr. Ford did not speak. His statement said:

"I am happy to come here tonight to pay a tribute to my old friend, David A. Brown, and through him to the great race which is proud and fortunate to count him among its own.

"David A. Brown is a shining example of the great benevolence of the Jewish people, their philanthropy, their eagerness to make this world better, to educate the untutored, to heal the sick, to care for the orphans; their intense and intelligent participation in all that makes for civic right ousness and social justice stamps them a great people—and David A. Brown is one of their greatest and finest sons."

Mr. Brown is chairman of the directors of the China famine relief and of the United Jewish campaign.

While here he was seen frequently in company of a film actress, a European girl he met abroad.

PLANS BILL TO CALL INDUSTRY IN WAR

Washington, May 24 (AP)—The War Department is preparing for early submission to Congress a bill to mobilize industry in wartime on the same basis that manpower is conscripted.

Secretary Good says the measure is expected to be among the first legislative matters to come before Congress at its regular session in December. The bill probably will cover all phases of finance and resources.

The national defense act places upon the War Department the responsibility of preparing plans for the mobilization of industries in war time, and the proposed legislation would authorize their actual draft by the President.

The department's plans for emergency industrial mobilization are laid along the following lines:

Financing of contractors to whom war contracts are allotted.

Prevention of profiteering and stabilization of prices in war time.

Provision of machinery for settlement of war-time industrial disputes.

Maintenance of a constant flow of raw materials and organization of all transportation systems.

Officials of the department who have long publicly urged the passage of some legislation to provide for emergency industrial mobilization declare that industry is at its weakest points, both through disorganization and sudden loss of man power, upon a declaration of war.

50 INSURGENTS ARE KILLED IN MEXICO

Mexico City, May 24 (AP)—A graphic account of a battle at the town of Mexicacan in the State of Jalisco, during which 50 insurgents were killed and 30 wounded, was given in Guadalajara dispatches to Excelsior today.

Fifteen hundred insurgents under command of Enrique Gorostieta, described as the supreme chief of the religious insurgents in Mexico, were defeated by federal troops under Gen. Saturnino Cedillo. The insurgents, who had captured the town some time ago, were driven from it after two hours of fighting.

DIPLOMATIC SET STIRRED AS WIFE FLEES ATTACHE

Washington, May 24 (INS)—A marital rupture between Luciano Mascia, second secretary of the Italian embassy and his wife, Anna Domville, disclosed by the latter's departure for Montreal, her former home, has caused a stir in diplomatic and social Washington.

Discord in the marital happiness of the socially popular couple came to a head the night of April 9, resulting in a thrilling midnight escape by Signora Mascia with her 20-months'old daughter by automobile to Baltimore. From that city Signora Mascia caught a train for Montreal. She secreted the baby, Yolanda Marie, somewhere in Canada, and returned to Washington.

Signora Mascia is the daughter of a prominent Montreal banker, and met the Italian diplomat in that city when he was consul there. On his return to Italy he conducted an ardent courtship by mail for nearly three years.

STUDENTS PAY DUCE HOMAGE

Rome, May 24 (AP)—Fifteen thousand university students, all members of Fascist groups, descended on Rome today to commemorate the 14th anniversary of Italy's declaration of war against the Central Powers and to render homage to Premier Mussolini.

Wearing their picturesque caps in the colors of their respective institutions and carrying the historic banners of the student corps of such famous old seats of learning as Padua, Bologna, Florence and Rome, they marched in military formation to the "Altar of the Fatherland," the big white and gold memorial in the Piazza Venezia, and there laid wreaths before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

This afternoon they have free entrance to the National Flower Show, which opens today, and this evening there will be a big film program in the Piazza d'Esedra devoted to propaganda for Alpine sports.

Zoo Family Will Be Increased Soon

In order that the Franklin Park Zoo may be even more interesting and the the city's official family at the recreation park larger and more varied, Mayor Nichols announces he has instructed Park Commissioner Long to purchase several additional specimens for the zoo. Notable among these are two white storks. The others include six Rhesus monkeys, a pair of South American jabiru, one pair of white necked trumpeters, one red wattled guan and one Malay tapir.

Texas Wool Bought by Boston Firms

San Angelo, Tex., May 24 (AP)—With the sale here of 50,000 pounds of year-old fleeces by the Texas Wool & Mohair Company to Marston & Co. and Hallowell, Jones & Donald, both Boston firms, came the private announcement that the Texas production this season would reach at least 33,000,000 pounds, the largest in the history of the state.

The sales followed the purchase earlier in the week by John Allison for Adams & Leland, Boston, of 650,000 pounds of wool from Charles Schriener at Kerrville. Top prices for the season for eight months wool have been 34 cents.

Shoe Plant Seeks Site in Braintree

Braintree, May 24—A special meeting of the Braintree Board of Trade was held to listen to a petition put forward by the Central Shore Manufacturing Company, now of South Boston, for assistance in securing a South Braintree location, preferably the old Rice & Hutchins buildings on Pearl st.

At the meeting it was stated that at first 400 people would be employed with an estimated payroll of $12,000, but that later the shoe company representatives said that 1200 people would be eventually employed at a payroll of $40,000 a week.

Business Efficiency Now Helps to Distinguish Clubwomen

BEHOLD the modern club executive!

Good-looking, smart, sartorially well nigh perfect and extremely feminine!

Well, when the country's clubwomen stream into Boston next Monday as delegates to the General Federation Biennial Council the majority of them will carry small, black cases.

One might mistake them for overnight bags. But they won't be.

Portable typewriters, if you please! Such is the enterprise of the new clubwoman—the woman who travels round the world with her belongings in a single suitcase; but, in her other hand the portable typewriter, whether she travels for business or pleasure.

Remember the days when clubwomen went conventioning with trunks, hat-boxes and bags galore? Today such is but a memory of another era.

This year the "savior faire" of America's clubwomen is the predominating note of her importance.

Mid-Victorian methods of hand-written reports and "copy" of all kinds have been relegated to the dim haze of oblivion and today club presidents and committee chairmen of the greatest organized body of women in the world—the General Federation—will have nothing but the most efficient of business routine.

Hence her energetic acceptance of progressive steps for the success of one of the important phases of her work—typewritten resumes of departmental activities.

Back of this movement is Mrs. William R. Alvord of Detroit, Mich., chairman of the department of press and publicity of the General Federation, whose coined slogan "Pick or Peck, Hunt or Seek, but Own a Typewriter," has struck a vital vein in club life.

"Sending out letters in long hand is an mid-Victorian as the use of adjectives and violet ink in correspondence," Mrs. Alvord said in a communication from Washington. "This is by way of introducing the woman who will not only continue to hound the importance of her slogan, but stress its value in the general keynote of the council, "The General Federation as It Serves the Community."

"In fact, typewriters have become so necessary a part of Madam President's equipment for service," she continued, "that if it comes to a question of a new gown to grace the office or a typewriter, she chooses the typewriter.

"Every club should own its own typewriter also for the use of the officer or chairman who cannot own her own. I advocate saving money on programs and refreshments a meeting or two and investing the savings in a good typewriter.

"Clubwomen have acquired modern, up-to-date methods. Annual meetings used to be thought such a bore, so long and uninteresting. Even the church guilds and ladies' aids have perked up business meetings these days, conducted according to the best authorities in parliamentary procedure. The club movement may not have accomplished all that its ardent enthusiasts claim for it, but certainly it has increased woman's efficiency and taught her business methods."

N. HAMPSHIRE FEDERATION

The New Hampshire State Federation will close its 34th annual two-day session at Gorham, N. H., tonight. About 400 women came to attend the interesting program arranged by the State president, Mrs. George F. Morris of Lancaster.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of the General Federation was one of the guests and principal speakers.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Mrs. William Healy of Boston was elected head of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters at its closing convention sessions in Holyoke. She is the wife of Dr. Healy, founder of that great child guidance movement and director of the Judge Baker Foundation.

Mrs. Healy has served the cause of womanhood for many years and well. She was president of the Boston League of Women Voters several years ago and chairman of the education committee of the National League of Women Voters two years ago.

To serve with her the following were elected: Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch, Boston; Mrs. Robert E. Stebbins, Springfield; Mrs. Roland F. Baker, Boston; Mrs. Willard D. Woodbury, Boston; Mrs. Charles Peabody, Cambridge, vice-presidents; Mrs. Guy Stantial, Reading, treasurer; Mrs. Edward Scott O'Keefe, Lynn, secretary, and Mrs. Robert G. Sweetser, Worcester, director at large.

Mrs. Edward Wise, Newton, and Mrs. Harold L. Chase, Cambridge, were elected directors for three years.

The budget drawn up for 1930 calls for the expenditure of $17,454.

LADIES HELPING HAND AUXILIARY

The season's last meeting for the Ladies' Helping Hand Auxiliary will be held at the Home for Jewish Children, 160 Canterbury st., Dorchester, next Monday at 2 p. m. Mrs. Samuel Altman, president, will hold the gavel.

Of particular interest will be the report of Mrs. Colman Levine, chairman of the 5000 new members campaign. It is expected that the workers will have solicited more than this number into the ranks of the organization which supports the Jewish Home, when the drive is completed.

Exhibitions of the handiwork of the children will be on display. Young as they are, the boys have made brass candlesticks, wrought iron lamp stands, book cases and tables, booklets and calendars.

Guest artists are to contribute to the musical program. Mrs. D. Diamond is to be the afternoon's hostess.

SATURDAY MEETINGS

WOMEN'S ITALIAN CLUB

Mrs. Pasquale Balestrieri is giving the use of her home at 17 Pratt st., Brighton, for a night penny sale that a substantial sum may be contributed to the building fund, the goal to which all the members have devoted their efforts for the past year. Mrs. Lionel Cohn and Mrs. John Castruci are assisting.

This organization has a very up and coming Junior League membership which tonight will make merry in the modernist ballroom of the Hotel Brunswick. Every year in May the group hold their annual dance and of tonight's affair the following are in charge: Evelyn Giardino, president; Frances Albiani, Stella Aleta and Palmina Albre.

The revenue will be added to the league's gift to the Home for Italian Children.

LADIES' UNITY CLUB

Through the generous invitation of Miss Cora E. Crane, the members of the ways and means committee of the Ladies' Unity Club will take a box lunch to the home, 30 Newhall st., Malden, at noon to spend a social day, view her works of art and have an exchange food sale ending with an afternoon of bridge. These ladies support and maintain the Home for Aged People at 64 Bartlett st., Roxbury. Their activities are confined exclusively to the upkeep of this remarkable institution.

DESTITUTE CATHOLIC CHILDREN

Devoted to an annual custom, a group of Boston teachers will this year again hold their bridge and whist, which in the past has proven an outstanding financial success. Proceeds are contributed to the Home for Destitute Catholic Children and an unusually large donation is anticipated from this venture.

C. Agnes Dailey and Katherine O'Brien head a long list of workers, including Mary Campbell, Helen Lally, Anna Devins, Helen Keefe, Frances Dailey, May Foley, Julia Matthes, Grace Dolan, Helen Campbell, Mary Finnegan, Katharine McMahon, Eleanor Murphy and Mary and Mildred Fourke.

NO REVENGE ON ROOSEVELTS IN 'IDOL DEATH'

Shanghai, May 24 (AP)—Kermit and Theodore Roosevelt have killed what they describe as a giant panda, rare Asiatic animal, weighing more than 200 pounds and stretching seven feet from nose to tail. Its skin and skeleton will be taken by Kermit to the Field Museum at Chicago when he leaves here shortly for the United States.

(Although the Roosevelts described the animal as a "panda," available reference works give its name as a pandarctos; the panda is a comparatively small carnivorous animal living in the Eastern Himalayas.)

Kermit said he and his brother discovered the animal in the Lola country in the . sistic Hinterland after they had almost given up hope of procuring a specimen. One morning they discovered panda tracks in the snow. They found the animal sleeping, both Kermit and Theodore shooting at it to be sure it did not escape.

The Lola runners accompanying the expedition refused to carry the carcass, since the animal is a minor deity to them. They seldom see a panda and never harm them. The tribal priest conducted rites to purify the tribe and drive off avenging spirits. The tribe continued friendly, however, showing no resentment for the killing of the sacred animal.

Kermit said he was suffering from a peculiar malady which he judged was the result of eating native food. He said acute stomach pains recurred almost every fortnight. Theodore has accepted the governorship of Porto Rico.

AMERICANS TO ELECTRIFY POLAND

Warsaw, Poland, May 24 (AP)—A proposal to the Polish government by the Harriman interests for electrifying Central Poland, after being given approval in principle by the central government, was published in the Official Gazette to permit local authorities on whose territory the plant and transmission lines would be, to express any objections within three months.

Apparently there will be no serious objection. It is presumed the contract will be closed in the fall.

The Harriman proposal involves a $100,000,000 plan for a sixty year electrical concession in Poland. It includes construction of power plants and overland transmission lines covering more than one-fifth of all Poland.

The Harriman representative in Warsaw is now seeking to obtain the formal approval of the Polish government for the purchase of foundries in Polish Silesia from German hands, also relinquishment of the right of the Polish government to purchase these foundries itself by virtue of the treaty of Versailles.

PREDICTS CUT IN NEW BEDFORD LIGHT RATES

New Bedford, May 24—Mayor Ashley has announced that a reduction that will save the city about $10,000 in the cost of electricity current and gas from the New Bedford Gas and Edison Light Co. will be made within a few days.

He also declared he has reason to believe that a general reduction in electric light rates in the city will be forthcoming in the near future. Announcement of the reduction of rates by the mayor came after several conferences with both officials of the electric light company and the Public Utilities Commission.

As a result of the conference, the mayor announced that he would not approve the installation of a new engine in the power plant of the municipal building, as the city is assured of a saving by purchasing current at the new rates.

The cost of all current purchased by the city will be reduced, including the municipal buildings, schools, parks and street lights.

The question of power and light rates has been under discussion in city government circles since the first of the year. Recently the mayor vetoed a resolution calling for a general investigation of the rates charged by the company here.

JURY HITS USE OF SHOTS TO HALT AUTOS

Rochester, N. Y., May 24 (AP)—A recommendation that greater care be exercised in the use of firearms in stopping vehicles on a public highway was made by the jury that acquitted Glenn Jennings, United States coast guardsmen, of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of Jacob Hanson, secretary of the Niagara Falls Lodge of Elks.

Hanson was shot when he failed to stop his automobile near Lewiston, on May 8, 1928, at command of coast guards. A search of the car failed to reveal any liquor.

It was Jennings' second trial, a jury in Elmira in January failing to agree.

The jurors said testimony of the lone defense witness, Capt. James Hatcher of the Army Ordnance Department, that the bullet that killed Hanson had ricochetted from some object, had much to do with the verdict. Jennings was defended by United States District Attorney Templeton.

DEATH CLAIMS COOPERATIVE BANK HEAD

William J. Downing, president of the Harvard Co-operative Bank in Dorchester since its inception 18 years ago, and member of the Foresters, died in his home, 108 Washington st., Brighton, after a 10-day illness. He was in his 79th year.

Mr. Downing is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice J. Downing; a daughter, Mrs. Alice L. Murphy; a granddaughter, Virginia C. Murphy, and a sister, Miss Ellen Downing.

Mr. Downing was born in Boston and attended Boston schools. Entering business at an early age because of the death of his father, he continued his education by means of tutors. Prior to the opening of the Harvard Co-operative Bank, he was in the wool business, with offices on Kilby st.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 8:30 from his home, followed by a high mass of requiem at St. Columbkille's Church, Market st., Brighton. Burial will be in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

U. S. AIR CHIEF 'SHOT DOWN'

Columbus, O., May 24 (AP)—Flying without colors on their way from Morton Field to Wright Field, Dayton, Maj.-Gen. James E. Fechet, commander-in-chief of the United States Army air forces, and his pilot, Lieut. Elwood P. Quesada, were "shot down" by three red pursuit planes prowling around the sky today looking for a foe in their mimic warfare with the blue army.

They did not recognize the ship of their commander until they had twice zoomed over it with an attack that would have sent the air chief and his pilot plunging to earth had it been real. Then when the Reds discovered whom they were attacking they saluted like a couple of embarrassed rookies and sped away.

SAVE WOMAN IN CHICOPEE FIRE

Chicopee, May 24—Overcome by smoke, Mrs. Mary Pronka, 42, was carried unconscious from her flaming home at 1 Canterbury ave., Chicopee Falls, by two policemen who smashed in the outside door early today.

Two alarms were sounded for the blaze which destroyed the two-family house.

Christian's Body Is Identified by Wife

Omaha, Neb., May 24 (AP)—The Bee-News said today Mrs. Lavinia Christian of Plainview, Neb., had identified the body of a man who died here Saturday as that of her husband, George R. Christian, missing New York stock broker.

Previously the body of Christian, who died as "Walter Hayden," was identified by Ervin J. Smith, private detective of New York. He had been missing for five years, since the $2,900,000 failure of the Day & Heaton brokerage firm of New York. Mrs. Christian became hysterical after viewing the body.

Up Early to Stop Wear on Alarm Clock Spring

Chicago, May 24—One result of Mrs. Helen Johnson's suit to divorce Arthur Johnson was the writing into the court records of several new "light" stories.

Mrs. Johnson set forth that her husband wouldn't permit her to use the vacuum cleaner for fear it would wear out the rugs. He would set his alarm clock, then awaken before it rang, shutting it off to save the spring. Further, he would take the clock to his mother's room upstairs, thus saving the expense of a second clock.

On July 4, the complaint went on, Johnson did not buy firecrackers, but celebrated the day by going around the house shouting "boom!" for the same day, states Mrs. Johnson, her husband struck her in the face, so she left.

Johnson has filed suit, charging desertion.

ALL SOCIETY OUT FOR TENNIS AND GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY

Match Between Miss Virginia Rice and Sarah Palfrey Attracts Wide Attention in Semifinals at Country Club

THE RIVIERA HAS WROUGHT ITS MAGIC with Miss Virginia Rice, as society noted when this brilliant young player sailed forth to win her tennis matches yesterday at the Country Club, Brookline. Undoubtedly there's a new aggressiveness in Miss Rice's play which should take her far toward the championship goal. Having defeated Miss Eleanor Higgins of the quarter finals and Mrs. J. L. Bremer and Mrs. Rich Stedden in the women's doubles, our young tennis today approaches her redoubtable Sarah Palfrey in the semifinals, with the modest mark. There's no important day for me. Doubtless the largest array of society yet in evidence will gather for today's matches.

BRILLIANT PLAYS IN CRISP AIR FINDS Miss Louise Waterman, Miss Margaret Rich, Miss Dorrance Chase, Miss Judy Hasse, Mrs. Laurence W. Wightman, Miss Ann Wescott, Miss Rosamond Gardiner, Miss Cynthia Hemenway, Miss Dorothy Bodfish, Miss Maude Palfrey, Mr. H. Lloyd Hall, Miss Dorman Weaver, Mrs. E. V. Rice, Mrs. J. D. Corbett, Mrs. Lesley Watterson and Mrs. Marcus Sachs competing with Eastern champs, not a chance for the women's state champ, a tough house, but always Sarah Palfrey must be reckoned with.

GOLF, WITH ALL THE ADDED THRILLS OF the women's championship at stake, brings out another group of society sports devotees today for the semifinals at the Commonwealth Country Club. Miss Frances Stebbins of Bare Barn will oppose against Mrs. Donald M. Belcher of Wonderer, a former champion, and Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr. of Worcester will try for the present crown of Mrs. E. H. Baker. And with the weather man's permission a large group of society's best players follows them around the green with keen appreciation.

THREE WONDERFUL DANCES ON THE SAME evening and no end of scurry between Chestnut Hill, Wellesley and Milton! That is the quandary in which debutantes find themselves today. For there's golf at the Commonwealth, bowling at Castle Square dances and a tea dance affair. Then full dress parties entwine the afternoon hours of Harvard men in the welcome time will be Miss Barbara Weld at the Roger Wolcott home in Milton which is to be small and for a few intimate friends of the pre-to-traveler abroad. Meanwhile the hospitable doors of the Leland home in Wellesley Hills are open with a large group up in original costumes and the Longwood Cricket Club open for merry festivities a la rusticana.

COLLEGE CALLED MISS LIN- daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. DELL FISHER of Worcester Stanley Ross Fisher of Wellesley from the original plans for her coming out party last fall and so she is to make her debut on June 8. Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lowell are to give a very large garden party for Miss Fisher on their spacious grounds on the afternoon of that day. Miss Fisher is the Miss Virginia Rice, who competes with Sarah Palfrey at Country Club, Brookline, today, for the right to play for the State tennis championship.

Miss Frances Stebbins Opposes Mrs Donald M. Belcher in Golf Tourney

MR. DAN CUPID, AFTER A few more well-aimed arrows into the debutante ranks at Commencement time (and before), will spend part of the summer on the North Shore, having apparently chosen that as his favorite rendezvous in warm weather. Last year he was responsible for no fewer than 40 social register weddings in which one or both of the principals had their summer homes on the North Shore. He starts June with another record-breaking list of fashionable weddings, the first of which will be that of Miss Emily Evatt and G. Winthrop Brown, Jr., on the first day of the month. That is also the wedding day of Miss Lorraine Lincoln and Arthur Scrivenor, Jr., and of Miss Ruth Thomas and Joseph Burley of Chestnut Hill.

MRS. CHARLES F. MOORE OF Washington, D. C., will be matron of honor for Miss Emily Atwater Gardiner, who is to wed Edward Abbott Neily of Andover on June 5 at Emmanuel Church. Miss Beth Swearingen of Mississippi will be maid of honor, and there will be seven bridesmaids: Miss Elizabeth Brewster, Miss Isabel Lothrop, Miss Betty Shuman of Boston, Miss Margaretta Archbald and Mrs. Henry Humphrey, Jr., of New York; Miss Elizabeth Hough of Milton and Mrs. Francis Grover Cleveland of Cambridge. Mr. Stephen Neily of Cambridge, a brother of the bridegroom, will be best man.

THE USHER SQUAD WILL BE composed of Richard Neily of Winchester, another brother; Franklin Hammond, John Worcester, Francis Grover Cleveland, all of Cambridge, Donald Starr and Lawrence Lombard of Winchester, Dudley Wallace of Springfield and Howard Davison of New York. The Rev. Elwood Worcester will perform the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Mr. Cummings. The reception will follow at the Hotel Somerset. The engagement of Miss Gardner and Mr. Neily was announced by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Alfred Gardner, of 30 Commonwealth ave., in January.

CANADA SCOFFS AT DRY LAW

Ottawa, May 24 (AP) Senator George P. Graham termed United States prohibition law enforcement worse than a joke in the course of a debate on a suppression of liquor smuggling in the Canadian Senate.

Defending the Government policy of refusing to grant the United States request that liquor laden vessels be denied clearance, Senator Graham said that when liquor was shipped across the Detroit river the United States customs officers found it convenient to disappear.

He said a large percentage of the tonnage engaged in rum-running was American tonnage and the crews were American citizens.

MODEL PLANES SOAR AT MEET TOMORROW

An opportunity for the boys and girls of the Boston American Lindbergh Club to see what fun and sport can be had with model airplanes will be afforded tomorrow morning at the Boston Arena.

The Club, in co-operation with the Community Service of Boston, will qualify boy and girl builders of model airplanes at this meet for the national miniature aircraft tournament which will be held in Louisville, Ky., on October 18 and 19.

The tournament at the Arena tomorrow is expected to provide thrills galore. Some of the boys and girls are declaring that their planes will set some new records for model plane builders to aim at. One of the surprises of the meet has been provided by Harry A. Lang of the Lang Lumber Co., Everett. Lang, because of his interest in aviation, will present each boy and girl who enters a model plane-in any event a "prize" package bearing the name of the Boston American Lindbergh Club and the date of the meet. This offer came so close to the date of the meet that it will be impossible to have the pins made in time to give to the boys and girls Saturday. However, the name and address of every entry will be taken and the pins will be mailed as soon as they are received from the manufacturer.

CHANCE FOR ALL

The list of events tomorrow presents an opportunity for the experts in every line of model aircraft to put their planes in the field, and by the list of entries already received almost every boy successful in any way with those final models will be present.

The competition will be particularly keen in the Pusher and Tractor contests, because the entrants have all been qualified by virtue of their good records in previous meets this year. There are 46 of these boys entered, all of whom are interested not only to better their previous records, but also to win out against the other contestants.

The most interesting event from the standpoint of the spectators will be the Fuselage R. O. G. and the R. O. W. contests. These models must rise either from the floor or from the water and enthusiasm among the spectators should run high when these small planes are released by their owners. These little planes will taxi for a short distance along the floor or the water and then rise gracefully and circle around the Arena.

EVENTS FOR BEGINNERS

There also are four events planned by the Boston American Lindbergh Club and the Community Service of Boston for the beginner in model airplane building. Competitors in this event are those who have never competed in other previous model aircraft tournaments. These planes must have been constructed entirely from the plans of Frank J. Tonis, which appeared in the Boston Evening American.

This part of the contest includes three straight events and one trick loop-the-loop contest. In the first one of these events the planes must rise from the floor and their duration is taken from the time they leave the floor to the time they come to rest. In the second event the same plane is hand-launched and the duration is taken from the time it leaves the hand until the time it comes to rest. The third contest requires some adjustment of the plane so that it will fly straight instead of in circles, and the winners will be chosen for the distance their plane travels from the place where launched to the place it comes to rest.

The 46 boys qualified for the Endurance Tractor and Pusher Contest are for the most part interested also in the Fuselage R. O. G. and R. O. W events.

Some of the outstanding contestants in these events are Arthur Broomfeit of Arlington, Joseph Iranolli of Roslindale, G. Windsor Wentley of Dorchester, George Forbury of Roslindale, Paul Richardson of Newtonville, Donald Brunton, David Richardson of Newtonville, Leighton Harvey of Melrose, Merlyn Richardson, George Bishop and Gustav Liljegren, all of Quincy.

The prizes for the contests are attractive inducements for a great many boys to prepare well for the competition. A lively contest is expected for the "Lone Eagle" Bulova trap watch offered by the Washington Jewelry Co. for the plane that makes the longest flight in tomorrow's meet. The other prizes are gold medals for first place, silver medals for second and bronze medals for third place.

PROGRAM OF MEET

Below is the program for tomorrow's meet. All members of the Boston Lindbergh Club are requested to save this program and bring it to meet. It will identify each meet for you. The meet will begin at 10 a. m. sharp.

Court Aids "Friends of Bootleggers" in Fight Over Permit

Philadelphia, May 24 (AP)—Taking the stand that you cannot always judge a man by the company he keeps, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today ordered Samuel O. Wyane, Federal prohibition administrator for eastern Pennsylvania, to grant to the Lykens Valley Ice & Beverage Co. of Lykens, Pa., a license to manufacture cereal beverages.

The beverage company had been refused a permit because the company's three incorporators had "made a bad impression" by their associations with alleged bootleggers.

HOMES BURNED IN STRIKE

Elizabethton, Tenn., May 24 (INS)—The recent period of calm in the textile strike zone was broken early today when three homes of two strike sympathizers were burned to the ground. James Russell and Jim Hampton, strikers, were the occupants.

Union officials are searching the section populated by the strike-breakers and the workers who have returned to the American Bemberg Glantzstoff mills for the "[illegible] bug."

AMERICAN REPORTER PAYS VISIT TO QUINCY

By PAUL WHELTON

It is 304 years now since doubtin' Capt. Robert Wollaston crossed [illegible] from the Cape where the Pil[illegible] had [illegible] month [illegible] and landed in the shade of [illegible]. There will soon be many [illegible] of Mass[illegible]

Four years ago the city of Quincy celebrated its 250th anniversary and reviewed three centuries of history and legend.

It had and still has much to boast of in the matter of the famous, for it is not the least of which of the fact that it is the only community that can claim as its own two Presidents, John Adams and John Quincy Adams father and son.

70,000 POPULATION

Also John Hancock, patriot president of the Continental Congress first signer of the Declaration of Independence and first governor of Massachusetts, was born in Quincy at Adams and Hancock streets.

As if this were not enough to set up the Granite City as a historical leader among communities in the United States, the city includes the site of the first railway in America, that constructed for the conveyance of granite out of the old quarries.

From its start 304 years ago as the southerly portion of the territory known in Colonial times as "The Mount Wollaston," Quincy has grown steadily until now its population totals approximately [illegible] with each succeeding year showing advance.

The city is commanded for his third successive term by Mayor Thomas J. McGrath who was born in Boston, but who has lived since 1872, or since he was seven years old in Quincy.

CAPABLE FIRE CHIEF

For 12 years Mayor McGrath served in the Quincy City Council, then was elected to his present post, securing his second re-election last fall.

Since going into service of the city he has worked for the abolishing of grade crossings and for the placing underground of all communication, light and power wires.

Mayor McGrath is a bachelor and lives with his sister in Thayer [illegible]

At the head of the fire department is Chief Alfred L. Meade who has been fighting flames for 31 years, or since he was 16 years old.

He was for 20 years a call member of the Quincy department on a base pay of $5 a year, this being increased in his later service to $10.

Thirty-one years back he was appointed to the regular force and on August 1, 1919 after climbing the ladder, was made chief of the department.

Chief Meade believes the principal good he has done the department was to introduce a system of physical culture training, the first in any New England fire department, resulting in marked improvement in health and agility of Quincy fire fighters.

The fire chief points with pride to the fact that the biggest fire in Quincy within memory of the oldest inhabitant was the Berman block fire of December 30, 1918. The loss was held down to $150 000.

John J. Flavin is president of the Quincy City Council. He is but 27 years old was graduated from Boston College in 1923 and three years ago was elected to the council with the record of being the youngest councillor ever to hold office in Quincy.

The council head represents Ward 2 and has inaugurated in his district a system of "town meetings," called three times a year. At these meetings, the voters talk over the problems and needs of the ward and submit them to Flavin. Pres. Flavin is in the real estate business, but in addition to this and to holding his Quincy office he finds time to attend Suffolk Law School.

Motorists driving through Quincy soon realize that there are more traffic lights in that city than in any other, size considered, they have ever traversed.

Chief of Police Bishop takes credit for the traffic lights and also for the beat signal system by which all policemen are signaled to their patrol boxes when the need ariises.

The police chief succeeded the late Chief Goodhue three years ago becoming director over a department comprising 112 regular policemen and 13 reserves.

He was born in Guilford, Me., in 1878 but moved to Quincy when 12 years old. The chief holds membership in the New England Police Chiefs' Association.

Quincy now, in the matter of statistics, has 21 graded school buildings, practically all of modern construction, and a high, industrial and home science schools. The total attendance figures about 11,000.

There are more than 100 miles of accepted streets, 36 church societies of all denominations, a library with an annual circulation of about 400,000 and numerous industries, including, of course, the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, granite quarries and piano facturing concerns.

Incidentally, Quincy, boasts recent, has a school and street named for William Cunningham treasurer of the Massachusetts Bay Colony from 1630 to 1686 who was "permitted to leave" the colony because of certain outspoken utterances.

A visit to Marblehead will be described tomorrow.

Filene's COLD STORAGE FOR FURS

Now is the time for all good furs to come to Filene's Cold Storage

Are you a typist, stenographer, secretary?

If you're like me, you can't afford to take chances on anything happening to your fur coat. That's why I've put mine in Filene's Cold Storage for Furs. It only took a minute of my lunch hour to drop in at the fifth floor. And I found that I might call HANcock 3800 and they would call for them, either at home or at my office.

The charges were just 3% of the valuation, and they clean them with blown-air and store them in freezing cold, dustless vaults — the largest in New England, by the way. I'm thinking of ordering that new cleansing process that includes the furrier's finish — only $7.50.

In the Fall, I plan to get my coat right out of storage on the way to some game at the Stadium. It's right on the way, on the Esplanade at the Cambridge St. Bridge, — and I hear the Reception Room is great.

CIFRINO GUEST AT WELCOME HOME FETE

John Cifrino, founder and proprietor of the Upham's Corner Market, "the world's largest provision store," knows today that, as he would smiling put it, he's "a popular feller."

More than 1000 of Greater Boston's foremost citizens, including many of Italian-American descent, entertained Cifrino at a welcome-home banquet at the Copley Plaza.

Public officials, men of high rank in professional life, and scores of "plain folks" paid high tribute to the character, success, and personality of the storeman who, from a humble North End beginning, built up one of the greatest businesses of its sort in America.

Just back from a trip to Italy, Mr. and Mrs. Cifrino showed the beneficial effects of their vacation However excellent their appetites may have been, they had scant chance to do justice to their food, so besieged were they by friends new and old, proffering handshakes and congratulations.

Principal speakers of the evening were the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Richard J. Haberlin and former Mayor James M. Curley. Both cited John Cifrino as an example of a self-made man whose success has been built on a foundation of square dealing and generosity.

A message from Cardinal O'Connell conveyed the latter's best wishes to the Upham's Corner marketman.

ExMayor Curley, on behalf of the residents of the Upham's Corner district, presented Cifrino with a gold watch. A huge bouquet of roses was Mrs Cifrino's gift from her friends.

At the head table were Vittorio Orlandini, representing Mayor Nichols; Andrew A. Casassa, mayor of Revere; Michael H. Crowley, superintendent of Boston police; Felix Forte, professor of law at Boston University; and other notables. Joseph A. Tomasello acted as toastmaster.

CANNED MUSIC IS CONDEMNED

Denver, May 24 (AP)—Members of the American Federation of Musicians attending the annual convention here adopted a resolution condemning "canned music" used in "talkies."

"Mechanical substitution means a profanation of the art of music" the resolution said. "We discern in the current effort to introduce mechanical music a perversion which constitutes a fatal blow to musical culture, a deadening of the sense of public appreciation, and an indefensible deprivation to the American home.

"It is a direct surrender to cold commercialism and a departure from cultural standards which the American people will never approve."

President Joseph N. Weber announced the 1930 convention would be held in Boston.

NAB MAN WANTED FOR MANY BREAKS

Providence, May 24 (AP)—Ovila N. Des Roches, termed a notorious crook, swindler and housebreaker by police and wanted in a half dozen eastern cities for more than a score of offenses, was caught by Providence police after he had sought cover in this city following two burglaries and the theft of $800 worth of property in New London.

Des Roches confessed to having committed two jobs here, and is sought for larceny and fraud by police in Newark, N. J., Norwich, Groton and New London, Ct., Bellingham, Mass., and Woonsocket and Providence.

WAR GAS PUTS WHOLE WORLD IN PERIL

Berlin, May 24 (AP)—Anti-gas measures in modern warfare are characterized as a delusion by the investigating "international committee of Red Cross experts" which recently convened in Brussels.

In the "German Women Doctor's Monthly," Dr. Gertrude Woker described how the committee's investigations clearly proved that for the civilian population in a war of the future no protection existed. The futility of seeking such protective measures, she said, was apparent from the fact that all nations are busy producing new forms of gas which they are carefully keeping secret from each other.

As to the progress made in this most devastating form of warfare, the Red Cross experts believe, will comprise at least three different kinds of arms, each of which renders the protective measure for one incompatible for the other.

ANOTHER BIG DRUG CASE IS COMPROMISED

Washington, May 24—The government has just compromised another narcotic case.

Last October New York customs officials seized smoking opium valued at $1,000,000 at bootleg prices on the steamer President Harrison, inbound from China. Four of the Chinese crew were arrested.

The shipment totaled 15,990 ounces, and under the present law an automatic penalty of $399,750 was levied by the government.

The law provides, however, that the ship cannot be seized or the owner held liable unless it can be proved he had knowledge that contraband was aboard. No evidence was adduced against the owner. Consequently, the penalty was laid against the captain, James D. Guthrie, who petitioned for a remission of the fine, saying all precautions had been taken to prevent opium being smuggled aboard.

The Treasury has agreed to remit the fine to $7500 and officials pointed out that no other avenue was open to them.

BRIDEGROOM'S SIGN NO GOOD, ARREST HIM

Springfield, May 24—Disregarding a "Please Don't Disturb" sign on the door, police today broke in on Wilfred Dorsey, 40, of Stafford Springs, Ct., and his bride of a night e ts local hotel, and arrested hi mfor alleged burglary.

One of the policemen knocked on the door and announced he had a telegram to deliver, inducing Dorsey to admit him. A short time afterward the arrested bridegroom started back for Stafford Springs under guard, and his bride accompanied him, declaring she believed him innocent.

Two Stafford Springs men were previously arrested on a charge of stealing $500 worth of jewelry and clothing from the residence of Daniel C. Keefe on May 11, and they are said to have implicated Dorsey.

Cashed Check Sent Another; Gets Year

Attleboro, May 24—Joseph Salvaria, 33, of North Attleboro, was sentenced to a year in jail by Judge Ralph C. Estes in district court on a charge of larceny of $15. It is alleged he cashed a check sent by the town Public Welfare Board to another resident, but delivered to Salvaria in the mail by mistake.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Kitty Grayson, 18, pretty and avid for life, leaves business school and goes to work. She meets Jimmie Barron, who aids her when she falls from a bus. In the office where she is working, Kitty meets Irma Paintor, who introduces her to Frank Hinkler. Irma tells Kitty to be nice to Hinkler, but Kitty's thoughts are full of Jimmie. She tried, however, to forget him, as she has not seen him since the day of their first encounter. Kitty is guest at a party which Hinkler gives at a roadhouse. He suggests that they all go to his bungalow, and Kitty sees Jimmie Barron, who tells her not to go. She tries to get out of going, but Hinkler insists she give him a reason"!

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 5

KITTY thrust the tell-tale letter into her bag the moment she became aware of Irma's entry.

Irma went on, as though thinking aloud: "Men are really far more bother than they're worth . . . but I'm crazy about Frank. And if I don't run around with him in this town, you bet some other girl will try to get her hooks into him!"

Kitty flushed. The tears were very near the surface. Irma's unexpected softness made her afraid that she might betray her anxiety over Jimmie . . . make her weep.

"You haven't seen the boy-friend lately, have you?"

Kitty thrust out her chin and bit her lower lip to stop it shaking. Where was her pride? Tears ached in her throat.

She swallowed, said abruptly: "I'm working late in the evenings just now. There's a man over from

HIT-RUN DRIVER IS JAILED

Ernest Wheaton, 27, of Ballard st., Saugus, was found guilty in Lynn District Court for going away from the scene of an accident to a person and not making himself known.

He was sentenced to one month in Salem jail. For going away after injury to property, without making himself known, he was given a month's suspended sentence. He did not appeal.

Wheaton was arrested by Sergt William J. Murphy of the Lynn police after Wheaton had crashed into a milk wagon in Lynn marsh early today, destroying 12 cases of milk and injuring the driver, Loring Smith. He was arrested in Saugus.

He told the court he went away from the scene after he had become frightened

Demands Senate Probe 'Fatal Exam' Plan

Charging that Police Sergt. John J. Montague of L grange st. station, who dropped dead today, was a victim of physical examination unnecessary in the case of a man serving an administrative position, Senator Joseph J. Mulhern of Dorchester has filed a Senate order calling for investigation of the Civil Service Commission.

Under his order a special committee, composed of one senator and two representatives, would be appointed to make a thorough investigation of methods pursued by the Civil Service Commission in relation to physical examinations.

According to Senator Mulhern the sergeant was in perfect physical shape before taking the rigorous examination prescribed for sergeants seeking promotion to lieutenants.

The examination was entirely without the bounds of reason in the case of a man seeking an administrative position, the senator charged.

Sergt. Montague dropped dead at his home, 33 Howe st., while dressing to report for duty.

After taking the physical examination yesterday he returned to his station and told Capt. Goodwin that while tugging at the lifting machine he felt something snap in his back.

A Dorchester physician, called to the house after Sergt. Montague collapsed, said his death was caused by a broken blood vessel.

Dr. Sumner C. Andrews, physical director of civil service, said Sergt. Montague wanted to take the back and leg test over again but this was not allowed under the rules.

He remained for some time apparently with the hope that he would be able to get a second test. The doctor said Sergt. Montague appeared all right physically.

FRACTURES MAN'S SKULL IN FIGHT

Patsy Ferrera, 21, of Bennington st., East Boston, pleaded not guilty in the Somerville District Court today to charges of assault and battery on Clarence A. Hunter of 1 Greenbriar st., Dorchester, and his case went over until June 1 for trial.

Hunter, the police say, is in the Brockton hospital with a fractured skull.

Police say both men are employed at the Ford plant on Middlesex ave., East Somerville, and got into difficulty at their work on Wednesday. The police allege that Ferrera struck Hunter.

Phone Box Thief Gets Eight Months in Jail

Charged with the larceny of money from telephone boxes in booths in Lynn, Edwin Rundgren married and father of three children, of No. 25 Clark st., Lynn, was found guilty in Lynn district court today and was sentenced to eight months in Salem jail. He did not appeal.

Rundgren was arrested after an automobile he was driving was seen to leave a store in Lynn where a phone both was entered. The number of his car was traced to a Lynn waitress. She told Police Inspectors Muckian and Sullivan of the Lynn police that she loaned the machine to Rundgren when she met in her restaurant. The police refuse to divulge the name of the restaurant. The man was identified after the waitress was shown seven rogues' gallery photos of Rundgren.

According to the Lynn police, Rundgren admitted not only the theft of the Lynn job but also thefts from phone boxes in Revere, Everett, Melrose and East Boston.

THERESA BOHNENBERGER, Washington st.—If the elevated structure was torn down we could make Washington st. a second Commonwealth ave. with beautiful trees on both sides and a smooth roadway. This idea is not as fantastic as it may sound, because it would be a very easy thing to accomplish once the elevated was out of the way. A subway would also improve service and would make this section of the city a more pleasant place in which to live. The street is really an artery to the town south of here, and if it were recently paved, the traffic situation would be helped immeasurably.

Loughran Choice Over Schaaf in Bout at Garden

ERNIE IS BANKING ON HIS PUNCH TO WIN

By JACK CONWAY

TOMMY LOUGHRAN, world's light heavyweight champion, and Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight contender, are eagerly waiting for the sound of the gong which will send them whirling into action in a 10-round bout at the Boston Garden tonight.

It will be another case of a master boxer matching his skill and speed against a rushing, bruising two-fisted fighter.

Loughran is the exponent of science, Schaaf the rugged fighting man. The speculative element has installed the boxer the favorite. They believe the mill will go the distance, with Loughran edging his way to the decision.

Schaaf does not lack for backers, who believe his youth, aggressiveness and punch will enable him to turn the tide of battle in his favor.

Tonight's bout presents a glorious opportunity for the 20-year-old Schaaf. Ernie received his baptism of fire in big league company when he outscored Johnny Risko at the Garden. Now he is presented with an opportunity to blaze his way to the pugilistic heights.

If Schaaf can upset Loughran, he will secure a place in the front line trenches in the heavyweight title for Gene Tunney's vacated throne.

LOUGHRAN, great boxer, will go down if hit hard enough on the chin. Leo Lomski, Aberdeen assassin, dropped Tommy twice in the first round. Only a split second deprived Lomski of the championship.

Loughran has been on the floor on other bouts, and so cannot take too many liberties with the heavy hitting Schaaf.

Phil Schlossberg reports that Schaaf is in the best possible condition and prepared to set a dizzy pace from the bell.

Loughran has been in Boston all week. He finished his training at Kelley & Hayes' Gym. He looked the part of a perfect fighting machine.

Tommy is matched to defend his light heavyweight championship against James J. Braddock at the Yankee Stadium on July 18. If successful in the Braddock match, Loughran intends to vacate his title and invade the heavyweight ranks. Loughran realizes he will make much more money as a heavyweight contender than as a light heavyweight boss. Other than Braddock, there isn't a light heavyweight whom the public believes has even an outside chance of victory against Loughran.

How Schaaf and Loughran Size Up

SUPPORTING this heavyweight feature, one of the best preliminary cards of the season has been arranged and Hub fans will get their first glimpse at two of the hardest hitting middleweights in the country, when Gary Leach of Syracuse meets Harry Smith of New York in the eight round semi-final. Both boys have piled up long knockout lists and their work in the ring has been truly spectacular.

Four six-round contests also are carded with Harry Sabina, local favorite meeting Joe Mack of Manchester and Joe Barlow of New York taking on Jack Wolf of Philadelphia, Loughran's sparring partner. Joe Zelinsky of Syracuse faces Joe Tavoleri of the North End and Joe Accetta of Providence meets Walter Peters of Germany who came here with Max Schmeling.

Timilty-Glynn Win Handball Tourney

The final series of games of the indoor season of handball was played at the Cabot st. gym for the championship, and resulted in the defeat of Hinds and Caswell. Timilty and Glynn were the winners and the score was 21 to 0 on game and 21 to 3 the other game.

RAWSON FINDS TWO SPARRING PARTNERS

Big Boy Rawson, the Dorchester knockout king, trains with Shadow Bowden and Ray Thompson at Toland's Gymnasium today and tomorrow in preparation for his 10-round battle with Ralph Smith of Los Angeles in the Arena Monday night.

Rawson has been considerably hampered in his work by the lack of enthusiasm of the local heavyweights to box with him. In the regular ring or the training ring, Rawson is a "killer," a puncher who refuses to hold back his punches anywhere and anytime, and for that reason most of his punching has been done against big sand bags.

Today, however, the veteran Shadow Bowden and the promising young Thompson were obtained to spar with the big boy from Dorchester, and Rawson will end up his training tomorrow with their help.

Smith is expected to arrive from Los Angeles tomorrow in time to work at Kelley & Hayes' Gymnasium. The big fellow from the coast has fought Young Stribling, King Solomon and many of the leading heavyweights in the country, and he may bring a sudden halt to Rawson's wild winning streak.

In the 10-round co-feature bout, Hy Diamond, the jewel of the West End, will attempt to score his second successive victory over Charlie Parker of the South End. Two weeks ago, he blinded Parker with his stream of jabs and phantom-like footwork in an eight-round bout. Parker, because of his experience in 10-rounders, believes he can beat the smaller, slighter Diamond over the longer route, and they have been rematched over that distance. Once again, the promising Diamond rules a favorite.

The preliminary card is one of Col Bob McKirdy's best efforts. The list of bouts is headed by the names of such popular youngsters as George Carney, North End middleweight; Johnny Daley of Waltham, former national amateur featherweight king and Olympic star; Lenie Baker, national amateur welterweight champion of 1929; Jack McCarron, former New England amateur lightweight champion, and Stanley Winneryk of Lawrence.

McCarron will meet Joey Conley of Dorchester; Baker will be paired with Tommy Burns of Lynn; Daley with Goodie Schwartz of Cambridge; Carney with Jack Dorsack, and Winneryk with Al Capone.

Helen Wills and Partner Defeated

Paris, May 23—The vivacious Senorita Elia de Alvarez out-pokered the reliable Miss Helen Wills, sometimes known as "little poker face," in a brilliant tennis doubles match.

Largely as a result of the Spanish girl's dashing play, Miss Wills and her fellow Californian, Edith Cross, the first and third ranking players of the United States, were eliminated in the women's doubles quarter-finals of the French championships by the senorita and her Dutch partner, Kea Bouman.

Met Golf Players in Semifinals

Greenwich, Ct., May 24—Play in the women's metropolitan golf championship is in the semifinal round today with Maureen Orcutt and Helen Hicks, the joint favorites, still in the running.

Miss Orcutt, who has won the metropolitan crown for the past three years, meets Mrs. Thomas Hucknall of Woodway, while Miss Hicks is matching strokes with Mrs. Leo Federman of Glen Oaks.

Essex Country School Track Meet Saturday

The eighth annual Essex County interscholastic track and field championships will be held at Memorial Park, Lawrence, tomorrow afternoon. A total of 200 boys, representing 10 schools, will compete in the various events. Lawrence high, winner of the Merrimack valley title on last Saturday, at the same field, is favored to take the county crown, also.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

EAGLE NINE AT MANHATTAN

New York, May 24—Boston College is made favorite to defeat Manhattan College on the diamond today.

The Green of Manhattan is represented by a good small college nine but the boys from Boston are in a superior class and may well duplicate the previous score of 16-0 by which they walloped Manhattan.

Florenza will pitch for Manhattan and J. Burns will be behind the bat. This Manhattan twirler showed fairly well against B. C. in Boston according to all reports when he relieved A. Burns who was driven to the showers in five innings.

Boston College's battery will be Dixon and Smith. Dixon hurled against Manhattan and held them to four hits in five innings and ought to be able to keep the bingles as scattered in today's game.

Collegiate baseball fans are expected to turn out in large numbers to see the Boston team, for not only does it play smart baseball, but there are two ball players who may be with the Yankees at the close of the college season now wearing the Maroon and Gold of B. C.

They are Al Weston, captain and first baseman, and "Hank" O'Day, third baseman. Weston, an all-American quarterback, led the college batters in hitting a year ago and is well up with the best this spring. McGann, Yankee scout, looked him over in Boston a week ago and brought back good reports to Miller Huggins and the Yankee management.

The Boston College team will play Fordham up at Fordham Field tomorrow afternoon.

MR. BOSTON

by JACK CONWAY

"BABE RUTH continues to be the greatest drawing card in sport," said Mr. Boston today. "His stay in Boston during the present series between the Red Sox and Yankees will prove this contention once more.

"With fair weather, Fenway Park will be jammed tomorrow, while Braves Field will not be any too large to hold the mob that will wish to attend the Sunday game.

"Jack Dempsey has been the only athlete with a crowd pull as great as that of the Babe. But Dempsey's ring appearances were infrequent, while Ruth is in there doing his stuff in some 150 games a year.

"For years I considered Ruth, Dempsey and Strangler Lewis the greatest drawing cards in sports. Gus Sonnenberg has proved an even greater attraction than Lewis. He has much the same kind of a hold on the public as Ruth and Dempsey.

"BROTHER GILBERT, who was Athletic Director at St. Mary's Industrial School when Ruth first attracted attention, is now in charge of the Mission Church High School in Roxbury. He will probably be able to see his former protege play in the Saturday game at Fenway Park. I met Brother Gilbert recently and it was natural that the conversation should turn to Ruth.

"'It was as a catcher that Babe started his career at St. Mary's School,' said Brother Gilbert. 'He would put the big mitt on his left hand. After he would catch the ball he would toss the glove under his right arm and either shoot the ball to one of the bases or toss it back to the pitcher.

"'We had a pitcher by the name of Meadows. He was the best hurler I have ever seen. When he went up with Jersey City, he fanned the first 11 batters to face him. He was injured in action during the war and that ended his baseball career.

"'Jack Dunn of Baltimore came to St. Mary's to get a look at Meadows and ended by signing Ruth. The latter, when throwing to the bases, had a hop on his ball. Dunn and myself decided he could be converted into a pitcher.

"'At the bat Babe always looked good. When he connected, he hit the ball a mile. He even looked impressive when striking out.

"'Since becoming famous, Ruth has not changed. He will travel miles to make some sick youngsters or shutins happy. I believe this trait in Ruth's character is responsible for his great popularity.'"

SOLLY Snyder dropped in on Mr. Boston.

"I am claiming the world's colored middleweight championship for Homer Robertson," said Solly. "He has licked all-comers among the negro boxers. I consider Robertson one of the best middleweights in the world. He is open to meet all-comers and isn't worried about such a little thing as the other fellow's reputation. The trouble with the opposition is that it does not want any part of Homer."

MARIN PLESTINA called on the telephone.

"I have finally got some sparring partners," he said. "After next Tuesday night Sonnenberg will also be looking for a job as somebody's sparring partner."

Paolino-Schmeling Go Likely to Draw $1,000,000

FIGHT HAS PLENTY OF COLOR

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Serv., Inc.

NEW YORK, May 24—It has been said that the day of the Million dollar boxing show is done. I am inclined to think think the battle between Herr Max Schmeling, the Black Uhlan of hte Rhine, and Senor Paolino Uzcudun, the Beezark of the Basque, will prove to be the contrary.

My guess is that it will be a mil Lon gross. Of course, the fact that it is sponsored by the famous Milk Fund, of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman, lends it added drawing power beyond the average exposition of what Mr Tunney calls the dignified profession.

But even so, I think the Schmeling-Uzcudun affair would come close to a million as a private promotion, rather than as a charity event.

It presents the most sensational figure produced by the dignified profession in years, with an opponent who does something more than make motions inside those ropes.

It will be the first exposition of the dignified profession of any consequence in New York this year, and it will come about as close to providing Mr. James J Tunney's successor as heavyweight champion of the world as any bout that could be arranged.

ALREADY reservations of blocks of the most expensive seats at the Yankee stadium on June 27 have come in from outside cities. The top price is to be $25, with some seats at $50.

At this scale it doesn't take such an enormous crowd to gross a million dollars, if you have the attraction.

Mr. James J Tunney defending his title as champion of the world against Thomas Heeney, couldn't reach a million, but William Harrison Dempsey did it in a championship fight with Jack Sharkey of Boston.

This card didn't suggest the hotels that Uzcudun-Schmeling affair promises. Sharkey has none of the color of either the German or the Espanard. It is doubtful if he would have had any part in a million dollar gate had he been picked as Schmeling's opponent instead of the ole Beezark.

DEMPSEY, of course, would draw a million just now against either the Beezark or the Black Uhlan, but if Dempsey lets his popularity cool another year, I doubt if he will be any extraordinary card. If he intends fighting again, which I think he does, it must be this year.

I am inclined to think he will be matched with the winner of the Uzcudun Schmeling battle for September. It promises to be the big 'natural' after the German and the Spaniard get through.

The Beezark of the Basque is to train at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., the home town of William F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, who is assisting Mrs. Hearst in the promotion of the 1929 Milk Fund show.

The lads who have visited Hoosick Falls, which all insist on calling Hoosis Falls, tell me that it is a great spot.

Griffiths, Fields Tested Tonight

Chicago, May 24 (AP)—Tuffy Griffiths, [illegible] weight figure, and the championship caliber of Jackie Fields face rigorous tests at the Chicago Stadium tonight.

Rapidly outgrowing the light heavyweight ranks, Griffith will launch his career in the heavier division by clashing with Al Friedman of Boston, a stiff puncher and just cagey and experienced enough to make Griffith go his fastest to win.

Fields, recognized as welterweight champion by the National Boxing Association, will attempt to stop the rush of Clyde Chastain, youthful Texas slasher who has won by knockouts 35 of his 43 fights as a professional and lost but one, and that on a foul.

These bouts, each scheduled for 10 rounds, will be supplemented by another 10-rounder between Armando Santiago of Cuba and Luis Vicentini of Chile, 135-pounders.

Schoolboy Players Have Busy Week-End

NEARLY 40 CONTESTS LISTED

By DICK McSWEENEY

WITH about 40 scholastic baseball fans listed for today and tomorrow, schoolboy fans should have plenty to enthuse over. City, parochial and suburban teams meet in one of the biggest baseball week-ends of the season.

Today's best offerings are found at Roslindale where Dorchester and Boston English scrap, and at Everett where Cambridge Latin is entertained.

To complete today's list of diamond struggles we have Clark School opposing St. John's Prep, Haverhill visiting Newburyport, Country Day crossing bats with Dummer Academy, Methuen warring at Amesbury, Quincy at Hingham, Chelsea at Lynn English, Mission at Cathedral, St. Mary at Immaculate Conception, and St. Clement at St. Thomas.

Getting a line on today's conflicts we find Boston English favored to down Dorchester, although the latter club is a free hitting outfit with a star short fielder in Billy Marshall, a youth who might be called the Everett Scott of the schoolboy shortstops.

English has the pitching necessary to humble any club. Fulton McLain and Lefty Tamulis are two of the best hurlers in and around Boston

THE Cambridge Latin-Everett affray was put forward from Saturday to today.

The Canlabs fail to see any rays of sunshine now that it is definitely known that McFadden will not pitch again this season.

Casey, Browning and Lakaskas will have to do their best on the mound to keep the Latin nine up with the leaders.

Everett took a surprising defeat from Newton recently with two of the best of the Smelting City pitching De Angelo and Ward, getting hammered by the Newton sluggers

Everett looks a little stronger than the Canlab team and should win.

THE many fine games on tomorrow's program bring together sterling nines in contests which should be packed with action.

Malden and Medford will write another chapter in their long sport rivalry when the Blue and Gold visits the Fulton st. grounds for a clash with Coach Roberts team.

George Beaman is slated to twirl for the visiting ball-hawks while Spalding will pitch for Medford.

On paper, Malden is a much more formidable team than Medford, but the traditional rivalry connected with the tussel makes any prediction as to the outcome useless. Medford will be unable to use Vaglian, third baseman, and right, outfielder, for the rest of the season. That's going to hurt

BRIDGE will find Brookline a much improved baseball team when the Tech boys visit Brookline. The recent win over Somerville has popped up the Wealthy Towners and given them confidence which was noticeably lacking earlier in the season. If O'Neil and Madden can continue to pitch at their present pace, Brookline will have better than an even chance to capture the Suburban flag.

Bridge will be a tough team to down, however. Saursky is hurling well, and Catcher Westberg and Outfielder are slamming the ball hard.

Newton and Waltham will battle at Waltham, where the local club is preparing to hand a reverse welcome to the Orange and Black.

Pendergast will do the tossing for the Watch City club

Nichols and Anness comprise the Newton battery.

THE private school frays on tomorrow's bill are going to cause the fans to take notice. Dean Academy is out for a victory over Andover, Yale Frosh travels to Cambridge for a tilt with Crimson yearlings, Dartmouth Frosh will invade Exeter, St. Anselm will try Sc. John's Prep, Kents Hill scraps with Hebron Academy, Belmont Hill at Groton, Huntington at Worcester Academy, Williston Academy at Cushing Academy, Reading at Monahann, Milton at Pomfret, Lowell at St. Peter's Tabor Academy at St. George's, Worcester Commerce at Nashua, Middlesex at Milton, and Orange at Athol.

Cambridge Latin will enter Leo Clancy and Frank Di Pietro in the scholastic golf tournament at Oakley, according to an announcement made by Faculty Manager Garrett Foley of the Cambridge school. Both Clancy and Di Pietro absorbed some valuable pointers on the links of the Lake Stafford Country Club last summer.

A pair of crew races tomorrow, find Exeter's eight at Middlesex, while Pomfret rows against Tabor.

Melrose takes on the Winthrop net men at Winthrop today. Another match with Watertown and Lexington as opponents will be held at the latter's courts.

METROPOLITAN HANDICAP ON

New York, May 24 (AP)—The Metropolitan Handicap, rated as the most popular of American races of one mile for mature horses, receives its 36th running tomorrow with all the color that attends the renewal of a historic stake event at fashionable Belmont Park

The American "Newmarket" will pay the winner about $16,000. It promises to be one of the smartest contests in the history of the beautiful Long Island track.

Topping the list of eligibles is Osmand, Joseph E. Widener's great five-year-old, which turned in his second Toboggan Handicap victory last Saturday. The mighty son of Peter Pan is slated to carry the heavy impost of 128 pounds, the same weight he packed as he won the opening feature at Belmont

Ten pounds less in the saddle finds Polydor, William Zeigler, Jr.'s flashy four-year-old, which made a horse race out of the Toboggan, losing only by a head.

Dartmouth Ends Spring Football

Today, in the semi-finals, Miss Orcutt, winner of the championship for the last three years, was matched against Mrs. Thomas Hucknall of Woodway and Miss Hicks, the co-favorite, against Mrs. Leo Federman.

HARVARD-YALE POLO GAME

New Haven, May 24—Phipps Field will be the scene of a colorful gathering tomorrow afternoon, when Yale and Harvard meet at polo, in the first out-of-door game of the year for these teams.

Harvard will come here late today with an unusually strong team. The Crimson last Saturday defeated a brilliant Army team, 11 to 10, in an overtime period. The Army was victorious over Princeton previously, while Yale was defeated by the Tiger horsemen, 6 to 4, in the last minute of play. The Blue team, coached by Maj. O. L. Gates, has improved materially since the Princeton game and expects to give Harvard a great battle

MARSHALL HUNT, New York scribbler, pulled a charlie horse in a billiard game; fell under the table on a push shot, probably—Carrigans are fashionable, anyhow; they have no socks—when all Sox players were used up, flock of cops came on field; thought they might help in a pinch—Ruth has brought his saving habit into baseball; how he plays that left field bank—Jerry Delaney says that even the run runners were faster in what can be called the good old days—Stonewall Jackson gets lots of campaign practice, announcing pitchers who try to stop Yanks—Flesting favorite over Sonnenberg; that's one for the books—Ernie wants to bet five grand he can lick Loughran; he should schast his money—and that, friends of the micaphone, is tough enough for any one day.

Old Gold wins second place at Harvard

Breaking its string of victories, this 2-year old brand runs second to the cigarette established at HARVARD more than 14 years

Two years against fourteen... a comparatively new cigarette against three veteran brands. Youth against age and habit.

Yet OLD GOLD, the youngster, almost won! It defeated two out of three of its veteran contenders ...and nearly defeated the third!

This is the story of the Public Cigarette Test conducted recently at Harvard, under the supervision of Edward T. Batchelder of the Harvard Crimson Editorial Board.

Time after time, in these comparative taste-tests of the four leading cigarette brands, OLD GOLD has won...and won decisively. In fact, with the single exception of the test at Harvard, OLD GOLD has scored an unbroken string of victories.

At Harvard, where pipe smoking is a tradition and the taste is for heavy tobaccos, smooth and mellow OLD GOLD faced its hardest contest. 148 undergraduates were asked to smoke and compare the four leading cigarettes. The brand names were concealed, but the cigarettes were numbered. Only one question was asked: "Which cigarette do you like best?" Answers were given by number, not by brand name.

Yet in the final score, OLD GOLD stood second in its total of "first choices" and barely missed defeating the brand established at Harvard more than 14 years!

Man o'War, the greatest horse of his time, lost one race. And in its first and only defeat, OLD GOLD, the two-year old, felicitates the fourteen-year old victor.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Russell and Pennock Due to Pitch at Fenway Park

YANKEES PLAYING LIKE ANYTHING BUT CHAMPS

By NICK FLATLEY

THE RED SOX and the Yankees have another engagement at the Fenway this p. m. Russell and Pennock, who were supposed to open this five-game series but didn't probably will have a shot at it in today's game.

The Carrigans, it might be mentioned, should get themselves a victory or two out of this series. The Yanks are champs, but they are not playing championship baseball. The whole club is unsteady and shaky.

The boys blew apart a couple of times in the pinches in the opener, and the faithful correspondents who have been following their devious trail, tell us that the flutters are more or less a habit.

And the Yanks are not hitting the ball with the deadly continuity that marked them in other years. Something seems to have come over the club. It's a hangover from poor pitching most likely. Mister Pipgras unfurled a beautiful ball game, but his supporting cast was probably thinking of some of those earlier spasms of his.

MILLER HUGGINS has shaken up his lineup, has changed the array that brought him a flock of glory and pennants and things. Columbus Lou Gehrig is hitting third, the spot made famous by G. H. Ruth, while the Babe is in the fourth compartment.

Just what this means is not apparent to the naked eye, probably just one of those superstitious moves to change the luck. M. Huggins, like all baseball men has his hunches. Bob Meusel, who has been batting around .400 and just below Antonio Lazzeri and Earl Combs has swapped around with Mark Koenig.

The old power is there, but the coordination of swat and the eye bearing confidence is lacking. It would better return, or those flying Athletics will be too far away to be overtaken. Didn't look good to see a champ club kicking runs in while their own pitching was airtight.

BILL BARRETT, snagged from the White Sox for Doug Taitt, reports tomorrow and will undoubtedly flop right into the lineup. Bill can hit that apple, and always has been a good ball player at Fenway Park. A few of the same are needed there.

Bill has been shifted around between the infield and the garden. A steady job as an outpost may make him quite a hero in these parts. Taitt did a lot of good hitting last season, and smacked out a few this year, but he didn't look like a player who would improve much.

He came down with a very bad ankle this spring. He never was too fast and the injury slowed him up a bit. For that is the reason for the deal, as Doug was one of the best clubbers on the team whatever his faults.

THE SOX play a pair with the Yanks tomorrow, and a single game Sunday. This will be started at 2:30, but the Sunday pastimes thereafter will get going, as the people vote. For this, next Sunday will be election day at the Fenway.

The fans will be given blanks and pencils and everything, asking them to state their preference for starting time. They have a choice of 2, 2:45, or 3 o'clock. We have an idea that the 3 o'clock will win by 10 to 1.

Seems to us the natives like to dawdle a bit over their rest day's roast beef and spinach. The vote notion is sensible, and will give the gang the idea that they have something to say about baseball affairs.

Advance sales indicate that an enormous flock of voters will go to Arcadia Sunday. Babe Ruth hitting that eighth homer stirred some interest. It was very low, the Thursday crowd being the smallest that has turned out to greet the Ram since the long ago days, and he had autographed ary a baseball.

BILL CARRIGAN isn't in despair about his ball club. His pitching has disappointed him, but he believes the hurlers will get straightened out well enough to win more ball games than they collected on the trail. Bill professes no alibis, but he does remark that the weather in the West was too cold for good pitching. He thinks that Gaston and Ruffing will begin to go when it warms up a bit.

Wilson has been improving steadily. He pitched great baseball most of the way Thursday but was weakening when the finish came along. He's not a youngster, and the chill spring does his arm no particular good.

Ed Morris has a cold, but will be around to toss the Sunday game. If he doesn't see service in one of the scurries tomorrow.

Farrell Discusses Golf Psychology

By JOHNNY FARRELL
American Open Golf Champion

IS the part that psychology plays in a round of golf a minor or major factor? A friend asked the question and I was not able to give a definite answer because that would be quite impossible. Golf affects some players mentally more than it does others. The mental side of golf has been stressed more than the physical. For those whose imaginations are more quickly fired than others golf is very largely a mental game.

Some outside influences that would upset one man's game would have no effect upon anothers. Therefore, you can understand how futile it is to weigh the part psychology plays.

I know players who won't drive an automobile the day of an important match because they maintain that it seriously ruffles their putting. I drive a car, yet I have never attributed sorry play on the greens to motoring. But, were I to get the idea that driving a car did disturb my putting touch, then I would abandon my roadster very quickly.

Once a golfer is beset with the idea that something is interfering with his golf, whether it be the brilliant hue of his shirt or the part in his hair, he will quickly eliminate it.

LEO DIEGEL is a bug on putters. If a few putts don't go down for Leo, he doesn't blame it on any defect in his stroking or luck of touch. He promptly discards the renegade blade and buys himself a new one. Diegel's experiment in New York is choked with cast-off putters.

At Mayfield, during the qualifying round, which he led with some uncannily fine golf, Diegel was dissatisfied even though everybody told him how wonderfully he had played. He fretted because the ball on several occasions refused to do the bidding of his putter while he was setting what was then a record for Mayfield with a 70.

"I should have had a 66 or a 67 easily," Leo told me in his despondency.

A few minutes later he was off shopping, for not one, but several putting blades, and that same evening he was out on the links experimenting with them. But Leo often goes rummaging among his discards and discovers some old love that he takes back to his heart.

WHEN a golfer loses confidence in a club it is hard to restore it. It is best to lay it aside and let time work a rehabilitation of faith.

Tommy Armour had an iron with which he did some of his most effective work, but one day it became balky and he promptly broke partnership with it. The club sorely grieved him that he didn't keep it but gave it to some friend and effaced it from his mind for what he thought at the time was to be forever.

Before he sailed for Europe Armour thought that his discarded stand-by would be a handy instrument at Muirfield and he was through his collection of old clubs hunting for it. Tommy had forgotten that he had given it away and, when he remembered, he lost no time in searching out his friend and borrowing the club for his trip abroad.

Since the injection of the lively ball into the game batsmen are being sought after more than ever. Miss Stebbins, Mrs. Baker in Finals

W. G. A. Champion Semi-Final Round

Mrs. Edward H. Baker, Jr., Oakley, defeated Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr., Tatnuck, 3 and 2.

Miss Francis Stebbins, Brae-Burn, defeated Mrs. Donald M. Belcher, Winchester, 2 and 1.

By BILL GRIMES

Mrs. Edward H. Baker, Jr., Oakley, and Miss Francis Stebbins of Brae-Burn reached the finals of the Women's Gold Association of Boston championship by defeating Mrs. Walter Tufts, Jr., and Mrs. Donald M. Belcher in the semi-finals today at the Charles River Country Club.

Although the gallery followed the Baker-Tufts match Miss Stebbins and Mrs. Belcher played by far the better brand of golf.

Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Tufts were so far off form during the outward round that the former was 40 at the turn to be 3 up, although Mrs. Tufts' medal was one stroke better.

Miss Stebbins and Mrs. Belcher were 45 to the turn, at which point the Winchester player was 1 up. The outstanding feature was the left-handed shot which, incidentally, was played with a putter by Mrs. Baker at the seventh hole. Off the seventh tee Mrs. Baker hooked her drive, the ball hitting a tree, then coming to rest in a position from which it was absolutely impossible to play the shot right-handed.

GOOD PORTSIDE SHOT

After a careful study of the position of her ball, Mrs. Baker took a putter from her bag and drove the ball out to the fairway, a wonderful recovery. Then two fine shots, followed by a beautiful putt, got her a half. Again at the 14th hole Mrs. Baker played another left-hand shot, but not with the success that marked her play at the seventh.

In the Stebbins-Belcher match the feature shot was Miss Stebbins' mashie to the second green, when she missed holing out for an eagle three by a scant 15 inches.

Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Tufts gave a terrible exhibition going down to the first hole, winding up with eights. Mrs. Tufts had played six when she reached the green, having missing five shots and visiting the pond. Mrs. Baker's third caught the trap and she also played six before she reached the green.

Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Tufts finally halved the hole with eights.

SQUARES MATCH

As Mrs. Tufts continued to miss shot after shot going down the second fairway, Mrs. Baker won the hole with a six, but the Worcester player, by virtue of a fine third shot to the third green squared the match, for Mrs. Baker bunked back of the hill and she lost ground with her second shot for her ball hit a rock.

Mrs. Tufts, after missing her second shot laid a beautiful iron to the green the ball hitting the flag pole and stopping less than six inches from the cup. After they had halved the short 4th hole with par 5's, a poor second shot cost Mrs. Tufts the 5th hole and a 6 was good for a win at the 6th hole for Mrs. Tufts sliced her second and flubbed her 3rd and put her 4th over coming up with a 7.

The previously described left handed shot earned Mrs. Baker a halve at the 7th and the cumulative was still 2 up going to the 9th hole which she lost when she missed the second shot completely after driving to the far edge of the green.

Mrs. Baker went back to 2 up at the 10th, with a par 5 and increased her lead to 3 up by winning the 13th hole, where after a beautiful drive she was home in two. A slightly pulled tee shot from the 14th, which forced Mrs. Baker to play left handed, for her second shot, lost her the hole to a 4 and three putts cost her a halve at the 15th.

She came back to win the 16th with a 6, and the match 3 and 2.

Miss Stebbins went out in front at the second hole of her match with Mrs. Belcher by canning a birdie 4, and she increased her lead to 2 up by parring the short 4th hole.

At this point Mrs. Belcher began to get going and aided by Miss Stebbins' 3 putting the 8th green from 10 feet away won three of the five remaining holes to the turn to be one up. Then Miss Stebbins took a turn at winning, picking up the next 3 holes. A 5 at the 15th made her dormie 3.

Going up the 16th fairway, Miss Stebbins half topped her second shot and lost the hole to a 5 2 down and two to play. The best Mrs. Belcher could do in spite of the fact that Miss Stebbins 3 putted the green was to get a half in five, and she went out of the championship 2 down with 1 to play.

TILDEN AND HUNTER WIN

Paris, May 24 (AP)—William T. ("Big Bill") Tilden scored a quick victory, 6-1, 6-1, over Herr Weitzel, German tennis player in the first singles match of the international hard court championships today.

It was a scorchingly hot day and there were exactly seven spectators sitting in the sun-baked uncovered stands this morning to watch the former American and world's champion perform.

Tilden played grimly and raced through the first set in exactly seven minutes and the other two sets followed swiftly.

Tilden played with tremendous force and speed and disposed of Weitzel, who is reputed to be one of Germany's most promising players, in just 27 minutes. The German player won two games on his own service and broke through Tilden's service once when the latter double faulted attempting to get more sun on the ball.

Francis T. Hunter also swept through the first round defeating Signor Del Bono of Italy, 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

Lili Alvarez the attractive Spanish senorita, and Kea Bouman of Holland, who defeated Helen Wills and Miss Edith Cross in the women's doubles yesterday, qualified for the finals today by defeating Eileen Bennett and Mrs. Watson, the crack English combination, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

Tilden and Hunter encountered fairly stiff opposition from the German-Hungarian pair who jumped into the lead by capturing the first step through the Veteran Kleinschroth's superior volleying tantalizing returns of Tilden's cannonballs.

The Americans began getting the range in the second set and never were threatened thereafter. Hunter's showing was magnificent in the last three sets, and Tilden played a steady game.

The Misses Heine and Neave of South Africa qualified to meet the crack Alvarez-Bouman pair in the final by defeating Mesdames Mathieu and Lafaurie of France 11-9, 6-1.

GIANTS IN 20 GAME WITH BRAVES

New York, May 24—Manager McGraw is in the drivers seat and is driving lustily for a second victory over the Braves today. He snapped the whip to a purpose in the initial encounter, which resulted as a 11-to-4 triumph for the Giants.

The Little Napoleon has had a knoff for a few weeks, during which his athletes performed in anything but satisfactory manner. Now that he is back Boss Jawn intends that his men shall make up the ground they lost during his absence and then go a little further down the line.

The season is young yet and there is plenty of chance to even for the seemingly hopeless Brooklynns for standings to be reversed, and McGraw, who has the greatest faith in the playing worth of the Giants, intends to drive his charges at top speed.

Meanwhile Judge Fuchs, Johnny Evers and Hank Gowdy, directing geniuses of the Braves are none too pleased over the showing made against the Giants. They figured from previous results that the Giants were just about made to order for their team and that all they had to do when they needed a few victories was to journey to the Polo Grounds or to entertain the McGraw clan on the home pasture in Allston, Mass.

B. C. Yearlings in Diamond Battle

Boston College's freshman baseball team faces a hard opponent in the New Hampshire State yearlings at Newton this afternoon. The young Wildcats have been clawing up all foes in an unhealthy manner.

Coach Frank McCrehan will send Johnny Curtin, a southpaw, on the mound to bag the Wildcats. Curtin, from St. Anselm's Prep, pitched against his old school team and lost. It has been his only mound appearance.

Maine Picked to Win N. E. Track Title

WITH an entry list of 375 athletes, representing 17 colleges, the annual New England inter-collegiate track and field championship trials get under way late this afternoon at Technology field. The finals will be held tomorrow afternoon.

The University of Maine track team, defending champions, were rated as the strongest entrants and were picked to win. Another well balanced team represented Northeastern University, winners the years of the eastern collegiate meet at Worcester.

Beside Maine and Northeastern other colleges competing were Holy Cross, Brown, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Williams, New Hampshire, Rutgers, Dowdoin, Boston College, Worcester Polytech, Wesleyan, Mass. Aggies, Tufts, Trinity, Boston University and Rhode Island.

George "Zeus" Wilczeski, Boston College's track captain, in hopes of qualifying in five events in the trials.

The big leader of the Eagles, one of the most versatile athletes in New England, will enter the high and low hurdles, the shot, discus and javelin.

Zeus isn't rated good enough to win any one of the events according to the pre-meet predictions. But he may surprise track authorities by winning in either the shot or the discus.

He has been spending a lot of time on these two events during the past week and has improved marks in both.

He has been high scorer in Boston College's track dual meets this spring with Navy, Colby and Holy Cross. Against Colby he gathered 21 points, consisting four firsts and a third.

Frankie Keenan Slight Favorite to Win Bike Race

CHAPMAN IS TOUGH PICKING

FRANKIE KEENAN of Revere has been made a slight favorite to win the 200-lap motor-paced race that will open the bike racing season at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night. But the odds on Frankie are very slight and it is thought that either of his three opponents, providing they get the breaks, will press him hard or even beat him to the tape.

Keenan has always found it difficult to beat the veteran George Chapman. Dan Piscione, too, has always given the Revere boy trouble. From advance reports Frans Duelberg, the fourth entrant, a German, will prove one of the greatest cyclist ever seen in this country, so it goes without saying that Keenan will have to be on the hop all the way.

Chappie will be an enigma to bike fans this year. For the last five or six seasons they have been expecting him to "crack" under the strain of competition, but he goes on and on, seeming as good each succeeding year.

This season he plans to [illegible] more out of the season than he has spent in the game in any of the 20 years behind the motor cycle in the game. He has won the American motor-paced title [illegible] times and has captured hundreds of cups and trophies.

"It is in my blood," says Chappie. "So you think I could stand on the sidelines and watch the boys speed by behind the motors? No sir. I've got to be in there in the thick of the fight. I intend to be two until I can no longer pedal a bike. I know I'm what you call a 'veteran,' but in the bike game a man is no older than he feels. And believe me I feel like I am only 20. Feeling that way, can you tell me who will beat me this year? I'm sure I can outride Georgetti, Keenan and the rest. You watch and see the final outcome at the end of the season. I'm going to win that title again."

BACK PLESTINA TO WIN OVER SONNY

Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight wrestling champion of the world will enter the ring against Marin Plestina, famous trust buster, at the Arena next Tuesday night an underdog for the first time since he won his title from Ed "Strangler" Lewis last January.

The huge challenger, 235 pounds of steel and whalebone, has created a tremendous stir in wrestling circles by his impressive showing. A week ago he tossed Freddie Meyers, former Olympic star; Andy Rivers and Sam Skorsky all within the space of nine minutes.

Since then he has been trying vainly to induce somebody or anybody to train with him at Toland's gymnasium. Yesterday George McLeod, one of the finest wrestlers in any man's land, trained with the challenger, and the same manner in which Plestina handled him boosts his stock even more.

Sonnenberg is being credited with plenty of courage in meeting Plestina, even though some question his intelligence. He is drawn fine from constant traveling and continual wrestling. He has burned up a lot of that restless energy. He is traveling along on nerves alone—nerves that may snap at any moment. And in such a condition he has agreed to meet the man whom Strangler Lewis, Earl Caddock, Joe Stecher and the Zbyszkos all avoided.

The champion is to receive his $16,000 guarantee for wrestling Plestina next Tuesday, the day before the match, and if he loses, there is to be a return at one of the 10 parks [illegible] days.

The bout will mark the last for which Sonnenberg will sign with Paul Bowser, the Tex Rickard of wrestling. Before he won his title, he agreed to give Bowser an option on 12 matches. Since then, Bowser has released some of his options, but this match of next Tuesday night will mark the end of the Bowser dynasty and will make Sonnenberg a free agent, to be handled under the promotion of another or his manager, Jimmy Bain may see fit.

It is rumored that Bowser has already drawn up a similar contract with Plestina, by which he will have an option on 12 matches with the "trust buster" in the event that the title passes.

Reservations may be obtained at Bowser's office, 115 Chauncey [illegible]

SONG PRECEDES AUTO CLASSIC

Indianapolis, Ind., May 24—Paul Whiteman and his "Old Gold Band" of 30 pieces, will troll around the speedway on a moving platform, and Reinald Werrenrath, famous concert baritone, will sing "My Country 'Tis of Thee," just preceding the start of the International 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Whiteman, Paul and Werrenrath [illegible] under feature to the [illegible] of the 33-piece band which for several years has been a feature of the patriotic spectacle preceding the start of the big race.

Moving Whiteman and his big musical organization around the 2½-mile track on a rolling platform within eye and ear range of the 150,000 people who will be crowded into the speedway enclosure race day, is the most spectacular adjunct to the speed contest the race management ever has attempted.

LaBarba to Fight as Featherweight

New York, May 24 (INS)—Fidel LaBarba has announced that he has withdrawn as a candidate for the bantamweight title and will hereafter fight as a featherweight. The California collegian came to this decision after losing to Kid Chocolate last Wednesday night.

"I fought better as a flyweight than I have as a bantam," LaBarba says, "and I believe I will come back best as a featherweight. It is the division I belong in, for I cannot make 118 pounds easily."

Fidel's next bout is at Buffalo, [illegible] he fights next Monday night. After that he has a date with Eddie Martin in Los Angeles on June 25.

New Bedford High Takes Tennis Match

New Bedford, May 24—New Bedford high school tennis team took all six matches from Dartmouth high here to-day, 6 to 0, in a dual [illegible] County tennis league match and remain in first place.

Four-Ball Tie to Be Played Off June 4

The championship of the Boston four-ball league rests between Belmont Spring and Charles River. The teams will meet in the play-off match for the title June 4 on a neutral course. The final standing of the two groups was determined when The Country Club took three points away from Woodland in the play-off of their postponed match.

By taking the fourth point in the match at Woodland, The Country Club could have lifted its team up into a deadlock for first place with Belmont Spring in group B, but in that one losing engagement the visiting side never had a chance. Perley Crosby and John Slattery took the determining point from Sunny Estabrook and Jimmy Wheeler by 5 and 4.

HARVARD HOPES FOR TRACK WIN

Harvard's varsity and freshman track teams are scheduled to leave Cambridge early tomorrow morning for New Haven, for their objective meet with the Yale varsity and freshman track and field aggregations. In the varsity meet, Harvard is a decided underdog, despite the fact that the Crimson unexpectedly took the measure of a strong Blue team at Cambridge a year ago.

Harvard's hopes for surprising the Blue depends on the showing of Arthur French in the dashes, of Mardoliier in the high hurdles, and on the ability of the Crimson's baby-riddled shot-putting crops to pick up some points.

Columbia Freshman Crew Is Withdrawn

New York, May 24 (INS)—The freshman race in the Henley regatta at Philadelphia tomorrow will be confined to three crews—Princeton, Penn and the Navy plebes, as the result of the withdrawal of the Columbia freshman eight. The Columbia authorities decided that the Lion youngsters could spend their time to better advantage in studying for the coming examinations.

HUSKIES TO END BASEBALL YEAR

Northeastern baseball team today holds its last practice session under the tutelage of Rufus Bond, retiring mentor, preparatory to opposing the U. S. Naval Training Station nine at Huntington Field, tomorrow. The former Harvard football and baseball star will be completing six years of service as Northeastern basketball and baseball coach, during which time he has turned out many successful teams.

Being neither superstitious because the Huskies will engaging in their 13th game of the season, nor downhearted because of losing a close conflict to Colby at Waterville, Me., Bond is determined that Northeastern will win its last start.

Statements relative to percentage gains in sales by automobile and other companies are obviously without value unless accompanied by figures that show the exact output. One automobile company which turned out about 10 cars a day during its active season last year, for example, turns out 20 per diem in 1929, and thereby gets a 100 per cent increase. Another company, making 130 cars a day, increases its output to 200, but no "percentage" figures alone appeared to have been outstripped by its little rival. "Figures don't lie, but liars figure" ran the homely old say-

Business Economic Digest intimates that "people in this section are important reason for business not responding adversely to firm money rates in face of inflation. They are strongly entrenched financially and those needing large sums of money for new plant flotation or stock issues more than in former years." Here are really two reasons, both of which have been noted from time to time in this column.

President Harvey S. Firestone of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. gave pause to many a listener-in when he announced a quarter of a million dollars would be spent in improving the Firestone plant there.

Electrical machinery and appliances, chemicals and pharmaceuticals, lumber, tools, wearing apparel (including hats and caps), tobacco and other products of New Zealand's industries have a good demand in New Zealand, according to Julius B. Foster, commerce department trade commissioner at Wellington. Mr. Foster is in Boston to confer with local business men concerning the possibilities of increasing the sale of the products of this commodity in the dominion.

Trade Commissioner Foster has just returned to the United States from New Zealand, where he has been serving American business since July, 1927. Previously to that he had been assigned to Sydney, Australia, for more than two years.

• • •

The dominion of New Zealand, situated in the southern Pacific, approximately 7,500 miles from the United States, is becoming increasingly important as a market for American goods, Mr. Foster says. The country annually imports in the vicinity of $50,000,000 worth of products from the United States. Mr. Foster also points out that with a population of a million and a half, the country enjoys a high standard of living, is the richest land per capita in the world, and ranks next to the United States and Canada in per capita motor car ownership.

While in this city Mr. Foster will make his headquarters at the local district office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, Department of Commerce, which is situated in the custom house.

MARKET RALLY SHOWS LACK OF ENTHUSIASM

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, May 24.—Wall Street derived very little satisfaction from the action of the Reserve Board in refusing a sanction to 6 per cent rediscount rate for the New York and Chicago banks.

Though industrial stocks rose to a slightly higher level of prices in irregular trading today, the market lacked the snap and enthusiasm which would have been displayed had not other worries been forced upon the minds of the small-fry traders that they are not nearly as jubilant over "easy money in the stock market" as they were a month or so ago.

Good recoveries in the motor stocks brought prices of the active shares 1 to 3 points above Friday's close. At 78¾ Chrysler, which has borne the brunt of the selling attack for nearly three weeks, was up over 4 points for the day and 10 points above yesterday's low.

General Motors recovered a point or so and Packard 3. According to rumors from motor factory district, the motor car manufacturers are having some difficulty in disposing of their cars at this time.

Steel industry heads at the institute's annual meeting today painted a glowing picture of prosperity and prospective conditions in the industry. Ever-increasing business with expanding profits for the steel mills was the prospect held out by James Farrell, Charles Schwab and other steel giants.

Most of these reports were of little value to market factors. Nobody was in a mood to load up on stocks over a critical period in the money market with higher rediscount rates still a possibility each recurring week.

Tire bears centered up their short contracts but the big bulls were conspicuous by their absence

SCHWAB FINDS STEEL TRADE AT ITS BEST

New York, May 24 (INS)—Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, declared at a meeting of the Institute at Hotel Commodore today that the steel industry is "enjoying the greatest peace-time prosperity" with demand the best in its history.

The steel industry during has been regarded as one of the barometers of business in America. Mr. Schwab, in addressing the assembled steel men against being led astray through current prosperity.

Quoting Mr. Schwab in discussing the excellent condition of the industry, "that it is equally gratifying to every member of this institute to know that as our stockholders become better fortified, the maintenance of better wages and living standards for our workers is also assured."

Price Trend Mixed in Cotton Trading

New York, May 24 (INS)—Cotton moved under conflicting market influences, and this afternoon showed a decline of a point for July to an advance of 6 points for January. July was quoted at 18.80, October (new) 18.92, December 19.03 and January 19.12.

Reports of continued favorable weather conditions in the South and talk of mill curtailment were somewhat offset as market factors by unfavorable crop news from the Southwest and complaints of too cool temperatures there

Wheat Sells Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 24 (AP)—Influence of dry downturn in wheat quotations at Liverpool and by increased import duties in France and Italy, wheat values here averaged lower today. Dearth of rain in Canada, though, tended to bring about price rallies. Opening 5c to ⅞c off, Chicago wheat afterward recovered all at times to close yesterday's finish. Corn and oats prices tended lower, with corn opening 2c to 3c down and later and subsequently continuing to sag. Provisions showed a disposition to advance.

COPPER buying is small here and abroad with recent purchases just about meeting the custom intake. More inquiry is coming in from domestic consumers.

ROCK ISLAND handled 106,914 revenue freight cars in first 21 days of May, against 106,180 in same period last year.

BOSTON TRADE IS INFLUENCED BY WEATHER

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Trade Review in this week's issue will say regarding trade conditions in Boston: The weather still has a retarding influence on many lines and the general level of business activity is not making quite as good a showing as it did last month.

Trade in wearing apparel and of domestic wool were more active this week, but wools suitable for the woolen trade were slow and quotations lower The market for other lines is somewhat weak. Carpet wool is moving in fairly large quantities at firm prices. Woolen goods for both men's and women's lines are selling well, and there is a particularly good demand for broadcloths

Receipts of wool in Boston to date have been 84,602,300 pounds, as compared with 97,053,200 to date last year. Considerable interest in wool has been expressed by Boston dealers during the week. Values are generally firmer and there is a demand for worsted yarns, and a few of the yarn mills are running full time. Cotton goods are generally dull.

The sale of knitting yarns has been moderate. Prices on some lines are firm. Cotton yarns are higher, but the mills are taking only moderate amounts of the raw material. Prices on finished cotton goods appears to be increasing, as new lines are found for the fabrics. In the dress goods line, some mills are reported oversold

Some fairly large orders are reported for rubber and rubber cotton yarns. Prices have been weak, though there are signs that the market is becoming firmer

Hide prices in the domestic market have recently advanced about a cent a pound, but quotations today are nearly 50 per cent below 1929 prices. Sole leather prices are steady, and business moderate, but a much larger business is expected soon. There has been considerable sampling of frame for cashers, but new business is light. A few amount of orders is being received by the manufacturers of prompt shipment, but retailers, as a rule, are buying very conservatively.

Shipments from Brockton for the first four months of the year total 1,900,000 cases, as compared with 149,275 cases for the same months of last year. Haverhill shipments amounted to 170,000 cases, a gain of about 25 per cent over those of last year. Boston manufacturers are also handicapped by a labor dispute. Chemicals are active without much price change reported. Coffee is firm, although about one-third went to the local furnaces.

Building permits in Boston for April amounted to $4,202,400, as compared with $3,784,300 for April 1928. Contracts awarded in New England during the week amounted to $9,305,700, as compared with $12,605,200 for the corresponding week of last year. The demand for building lumber is moderate received by the manufacturers only reduced. The heavier building materials are slow. Hardwood sales are holding up well. Prices are firm.

Glass Machines in Increased Demand

The Lynch Glass Machine Co. of Anderson, Ind., has received an order for the immediate delivery of four additional machines to the Hazel-Atlas Co. of Columbus, Ohio, according to T. C. Wrape, president of the Lynch organization. Today's order will give the Ohio concern twenty-two machines in all of its battery, the original eighteen having been purchased from the Lynch company as well.

Reorganization of Wickwire Opposed

Alexander Guttmann, chairman of the common stockholders' protective committee of the Wickwire Spencer Steel Company, has advised all common and Class "B" noteholders that legal steps will be taken to oppose the proposed tentative reorganization plan on the grounds that their interests would be entirely eliminated.

Useful Hints on These Pages

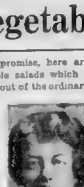
NO woman can afford to miss these magazine pages. Here you will find household information of great value, a wonderful article by an eminent physician, important advice on matters of etiquette by a woman who knows, and fashion hints fresh from Paris, showing handsome gowns.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

SOME people are very suggestible about disease. If they read or hear about a given malady they begin to think they are suffering identical symptoms. Such persons should not keep on wondering and worrying. Consult a doctor. This is the best and most sensible thing to do in any case.

Vegetable Salads

TRUE to my promise, here are some vegetable salads which I think are a little out of the ordinary and I can vouch that they are healthful and delicious. Of course, I do not need to caution you again about ice-cold ingredients and lettuce that has been washed under cold running water and kept in an air-tight container on the ice for an hour or more.



Martha Lee
(c) Bachrach

First, I want to give you a tomato gelatin salad, which can also be used as a foundation for endless other summer salads:

TOMATO GELATIN SALAD

1 pt. tomatoes.
½ c. of celery coarsely cut.
½ tsp. salt.
1 pt. water and vegetable juice.
1 slice of onion.
4 whole cloves.
1 tbsp. vinegar.
Dash of cayenne.
1 pkg. lemon gelatin powder.
Lettuce.
1 c. mayonnaise.

Cook the tomatoes with onion, celery and cloves for 5 minutes. Strain. Add vinegar, salt, pepper, and water to measure 1 pt. Heat to boiling point and dissolve gelatin in it. Pour into individual molds rinsed with cold water. Chill and serve in lettuce cups with mayonnaise.

Nut-Tomato Pineapple Salad is particularly popular. This is made by arranging 4 tomatoes, sliced, on lettuce and piling on each service pineapple which has been finely shredded (you will need 1 c. of pineapple to 4 tomatoes). Sprinkle with ½ c. of nut meats, broken, and serve with mayonnaise.

Cantaloupes will soon be with us and are luscious combined with tomatoes. Cut small balls from firm cantaloupe and place on tomato slices. Place on lettuce or water cress. Sprinkle with parsley and garnish with mayonnaise.

Tomatoes en Surprise are perennially popular. For these cut the centers from 6 tomatoes, sprinkling with pepper and salt and stuff with deviled eggs. Place on crisp lettuce and serve with mayonnaise or tartar sauce. These deviled eggs are made by chopping 6 hard-cooked egg yolks with a tbsp. of onion or chives, salt and pepper to taste, blending with 2 tbsps. of mayonnaise and piling into the hard-boiled egg whites.

For tartar sauce add 2 tbsps. of chopped capers, 2 tbsps. of chopped cucumber, pickles, 2 tbsps. chopped olives, 1 tsp. of chopped parsley, 1 tsp. of grated onion to 2 c. of mayonnaise dressing.

Tomato Slaw is a mighty nice hot weather relish and easily made by mixing together 1 tbsp. of chopped green pepper, 1 tbsp. of chili sauce, 1-3 c. of small cabbage shredded fine and crisped in ice water and dried, and 1 c. of mayonnaise.

And for a salad guaranteed to create an appetite on the hottest day, try tomatoes and anchovies. Using 4 whole tomatoes, dip them in boiling water, peel, make a hole in the center and chill. Sprinkle with onion juice and fill with anchovies (you will only need a small jar of these).

Place in a box of ice and salt and let chill for 30 minutes and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise or a cream dressing. This cream dressing is made by adding 3 to 6 tbsps. of heavy cream to 1 c. of mayonnaise.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

Feathers and Fur

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

TIME was when feathers and furs were the sole adornment of the masculine of the species. He it was who sported the wondrous feather headdress, and the finest pelts went into the making of his clothes. The poor little female occasionally, on very festive occasions, was allowed the privilege of a few feathers and a bit of fur, but the male was the one who claimed the finest of them both.

But nowadays! Milady wears a fortune on her fair self, with her paradise plumes and soft ermines and sables. And the male of the present day thinks himself lucky if he has a bit of fur on his winter coat. And as for feathers—he scorns them entirely.

Milady's privilege it is to wear the finest and rarest of all things. No more is she the content, willing little drudge, deeming it a privilege to bask in the glory of her spouse. Not so today! She it is who holds the center of the stage and takes the spotlight unto herself, and the male is content to see her beauty displayed for all to see. In fact, he's proud of the fact that he can give her all the things to enhance her wondrous beauty.

And the feathers and fur that once went to advertise his masculine prowess are now transferred to Milady, and how wondrously they set off their fair beauty!

Ah, well, time changes all things! What was once accepted as right and proper is now passe, and what a howl there'd be if we were to inform the modern man that he must dress in feathers and furs! He'd deem it effeminate, and rightly so, for Today. But Yesterday—that's another story! And Love is probably the one who has wrought the change!

AUCTION BRIDGE
by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

A FORCING TAKE-OUT

Auction bidding: South bids one Diamond and North takes out with one No Trump.

Contract bidding: North should take out the Diamond bid by a bid of two No Trump, which South should raise to three.

The play: East's opening lead of his fourth best Spade is won by West's singleton King. West returns the 4 of Hearts, the fourth best card of his own long suit, and East wins with the King.

East, observing Dummy's long Diamond suit with the Ace of Spades, the only side entry by means of which the Diamond suit can be brought in, leads the Queen of Spades to take out this re-entry, even though by so doing he establish the Jack for the Declarer.

Declarer, winning with Dummy's Ace, leads the Jack of Diamonds, prepared to lose two Diamond tricks if necessary in order to win three. With three Diamond tricks and two tricks in each of the other suits, he hopes to go game.

Declarer's lead of the Jack of Diamonds was with the hope that West would cover with an honor, in which case Declarer proposed subsequently to finesse against the other honor.

But West properly refused to cover, East winning with the King. On a later finesse West's Queen also won, but the Diamond suit was established and brought in later with Declarer's third Diamond. Subsequently the Declarer successfully finessed Clubs, and with two Club tricks, three Diamond tricks and two tricks each of Spades and Hearts, Declarer made game.

Care of Your Arms

By MARIA JERITZA

"PRESENT ARMS!"

I. If at this moment, you were asked to present your two arms to be judged from the standpoints of symmetry, grace and beauty, I wonder whether you could comply with absolute assurance that you would come through the beauty test with flying colors.

Sleeveless frocks are being worn more and more frequently each season, by women of fashion, not only for formal evening occasions, but in the afternoon and for sports. Arms are, therefore, on display at all seasons, and the woman who aspires to beauty cannot afford to neglect their care and exquisite grooming.

As I write, I am looking at the photograph of a lovely young girl, one who is famed for her beauty. Her features are good, but not unusual. Her coloring, which is exquisite, does not show in the photograph. But her chief claim to loveliness is her slender, graceful, symmetrical figure, including most beautiful arms, shoulders and hands.

Her arms, as they gleam forth from the tulle of her evening frock, in the photograph, might well be the model for the lost arms of the marble Venus de Milo. Soft curves hide the firm muscles underneath, which are padded with just the right amount of fat, as all healthy muscles are.

A woman's arms, any sculptor will tell you, are a fair index, in skin texture, symmetry and grace of her entire figure. From this it follows that a regime of healthful living, which will keep you at your best physically, will also tend to make your arms symmetrical, with velvety skin texture and clear, creamy coloring.

Winter is oftentimes a trying time for the arms, because they are seldom protected from woolen sleeves of sports frocks, and wool is sometimes irritating to sensitive skin. Goose pimples accumulate on arms that are not thoroughly scoured with warm soapsuds every day, then adequately rinsed and dried. These tiny defects are marred by pores partly blocked by perspiration and dust. Scrub your arms well with your long-handled brush when you take your daily warm bath.

If the goose pimples are pronounced, before bathing rub a handful of ordinary kitchen salt over your arms quite vigorously. Then wash them well, and finally, when they are dry, apply nourishing cold cream in the following manner: Rub the cream well into the palm and fingers of one hand. With this hand clasp the opposite wrist like a bracelet and move the arm from side to side. Work upward to the shoulders in this way, then remove excess cream with makeup tissue squares. This cold creaming process should take place just before retiring.

Be careful to choose a bath soap that is not drying—there is a great difference in soaps. In the morning, after your bath, and every arm, rub them with 85 per cent massage alcohol. If they are too stout, practice exercises energetically and adopt a moderately reducing diet.

There is no reason why any healthy woman may not, if she wishes, possess arms as lovely as those carved by the sculptors, not from mottled stone, but from marble of delicate, pink-tinted, translucent loveliness.

By WINIFRED BLACK

SO they're taking off the play, are they? It is indecent, they say, so we are going to close the theater. Dear, dear, what a pity!

I heard a number of women talking about the play at a luncheon the other day. They said it was pitiful. They said it was tragic. They said it was touching. They said it was "so true." They said they had never realized how much of the mother there was in all these unfortunates who make their living on the drab streets of great cities.

"What on earth is the matter with these women, anyhow?" said the stray man who got away from the table as soon as he could.

Dear, dear women, they were. Nice, kindly creatures, without a care in the world—why did they love to hear all about the life of the gutter? Now I've known a good many of these "romantic" beings and they always seem to me like poor things who were either too busy or too dumb to work for a living. I can't see anything so very romantic about that, can you?

And I began to think about the Masque Ball. I went to the Masque Ball once, years and years ago, when I thought the "Gay Life" was really gay.

I loved a woman who has been very "gay" all her life say she'd go to work if she could get a job at decent wages.

"Twenty dollars a week," she said. "That's what they offered me. Why, you can't get a decent pair of shoes for that."

AND as she talked, a little woman came across the street wheeling a baby carriage. It was a sort of disreputable baby carriage that has seen a good deal of use, and walking on either side of it was a child—a little boy on one side and a little girl on the other. Nice, chubby, rosy little rascals, both of them. And the woman who was pushing the baby carriage was young and she was pretty, and her eyes laughed. But dear me, what shabby shoes she was wearing! She never paid twenty dollars a pair for them —never in the world. Yet she seemed to be having quite a good time in life, anyhow.

Poor thing, what a lot she missed, didn't she? She and her baby carriage, and her sturdy boy, and her happy little girl, and her rosy baby; and the husband somewhere, at work, who loves her and works for her and for his children.

Attentions Paid Girls by Married Men

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

MODERN girls have many problems of romance to puzzle over, because modern girls take nothing for granted. They face their difficulties frankly, thoughtfully, instead of accepting the platitudes that satisfied the average girl of former generations. It is not always easy to get at the truth, and find what is the wise satisfying thing to do. Little wonder that many a girl writes to me for help in finding the solution of her problems.

"What is the answer?" asks Florence in the following letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"There is something I have been wanting to ask someone for a long time and I wonder if you will help me.

"A little while ago I met a man in a business way, and from the first I liked him very much.

"He's a man in the early forties and married, which I knew from the first. And he knew that I knew. As we became better acquainted it got to the point where he wanted to kiss me and I felt the same way, so it just naturally happened. It seemed the most natural thing in the world that we should.

"I can honestly say that from the very first he made all the advances. For my part I didn't lead him just for the sake of kissing, because to me there is no thrill in that. I asked him why he kissed me and he said, 'Because you appeal to me, somehow.'

"I know that he loves his home and his wife because he has always spoken so much about them. He did not have the line that some do, about being unhappy and misunderstood. I mention all these things, so that you can see what type of man he is.

"Why does a man of the type make love to a girl? Perhaps there is something missing in his own life—something he wants and doesn't get. I know for a fact that he doesn't go out with other women to whom you refer in your letter answered the question: the other woman "appeals" to him.

Many married men are too loyal to do a thing of that sort. But at least your friend has been honest. He does not pretend to be in love with you. You are an incident in his life—a little fun for the moment —you "appeal" to him!

The average woman is perhaps a little finer than the average man —at least, so far as love is concerned. You would not, could not, while loving one man, encourage another to make love to you. But your acquaintance is doing that very thing for the sake of novelty and amusement. That is his side of the story. What is yours?

You write that he has made you care more for him than you ever did for anyone else. Yet this fascination can lead nowhere, because he is a happily married man. You are not happy in this romance—in fact, you are bitterly dissatisfied. Is it not true? You rightly long for love that is fine and beautiful.

Do you not see the selfishness of what this married man has done and is doing in making love to you? Do you realize the folly of devoting your thoughts and hopes to him?

I believe, my dear, that once you realize the situation, you will pull yourself together, refuse to waste your life on a hopeless and unworthy emotion and will courageously seek new interests and friendships—a marvelous vacation trip, for instance, wholesome good times, and eventually romance that will lead to happy love and marriage. Do these suggestions point an answer to your problem? I hope so!

Psychology Need in Business

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

DURING the tremendous advance made by psychology in the last decade or two, business has not been quite as alert as it might have been. That is, business has been rather slow in adopting the principles of psychology to its own needs and for its own good.

The so-called "labor turnover," for example, is an enormous economic waste. And because, for an individual merely to think he is fitted for this or that, only to find after repeated trial, that he is unfit, works a severe and really unnecessary hardship upon himself and his family.

Except in cases where the efficiency of an employe is already known the majority of those who apply for positions are taken on because they claim they can do the work and not because their ability already has been proved, either to themselves or to anyone else.

Often, therefore, to maintain a working force of a certain size from three to five times as many persons pass annually through the organization as minimum requirements for the initial performance of the work would require.

But business as well as business men and women are beginning to wake up, as it were.

Efficiency tests are coming into more and more.

When a worker applies for a job he is given a list of questions to answer or he is required to pass some other special psychological procedure, the scoring and result of which will reveal to the employer as well as to the employe whether or not he is the individual wanted.

If a person would like to be a musician or linotype operator, as the case may be, it does not follow that he is fitted for such work simply because he has a taste for it.

And often a young man or woman enters a certain kind of business for no better reason. Or, perhaps, he starts a certain kind of work merely because a friend is willing to take him on and give him an opportunity.

Precious years are wasted this way. Often, too, many misgivings and heartaches are endured.

Tests of vocational fitness, by which people can tell fairly well in advance what sort of work they are best fitted for, what sort of work in general dovetails best with their temperament and ability, will some day be the rule.

HIDDEN FIRES by Aileen de Vilbiss

Story of Love and Mystery in Gay Honolulu

CHAPTER 11.

WEDNESDAY night at last.

Pacing up and down the grounds of the hotel that night Don Carlos knew that its was going to be kind to him.

Wednesday night was the evening of the tri-weekly dance upon the lanai of the Mon Hota. Other nights Don Carlos often joined Ruth Wilson, another little circle of friends, for sitty girls were always in evidence in the melting pot. None of them made any definite impression upon Don Carlos. With healthy, lithe bodies and flower-likraces, they reminded him too much of the girl who had come so near wrecking his life. Eve, with a face like a bottle!!! angel! And the mind of a fiddler.

He fought the bitterness which welled up in him whenever he thought of his wife.

He wondered what she was doing. Not one word had passed between them.

Strange how one's life could be so closely woven with another's for a long space of time—and then the crossroads.

Doubtless she was amusing herself with George Phillips, without giving a—Don Carlos—a single thought.

Ten o'clock. Eleven o'clock.

When it lacked a few moments of midnight Don Carlos arose, passed through the hotel, found a taxi and whirled away.

Leaving the wide avenue behind them the driver sought the road that led to Mount Tantalus, a green forest of velvety koa trees lying close to the city.

She had written that she lived on The Crest; apparently that meant the upper ridge. Trust these Japanese chauffeurs, however, to know their business.

At last the car stopped before an entrance gate, and Don Carlos saw spread before him a gray rambling bungalow. The warm, mellow moonlight bathed it all with a soft glow.

She was seated, framed in a huge peacock chair placed upon the wide lanai, but arose to greet him. "So, my friend, you were not afraid to come."

"Afraid!" Sheer exultation in his tones. The fight was in his blood, unknown desire in his veins.

He looked at the woman before him.

Could it be that she was Hawaiian? He had lived in the islands long enough to know that the Polynesian women wore the ancient holoku, which to him resembled the old-fashioned Mother Hubbard. He remembered that this same garment had covered her on the stairs of River street. But where upon others it was shapeless garment, she imbued it with grace. About her neck was a lei of the fragrant plumaria, almost overwhelming in the exotic perfume it gave forth. And in the black masses of her hair was one single rose-colored hibiscus, worn just back of the right ear. Yet her features were Caucasian; only in her dark beauty did she make him wonder. Placed against her chair was a steel guitar, as though she had been interrupted in her playing by his arrival.

Don Carlos remained standing, drinking in the quiet beauty of the scene before him.

Far below was the plain that was Honolulu, and beyond shimmered the water near Diamond Head; a million sparkling jewels placed in an ever-restless bosom as the moonlight cut a wide swath across the sea.

"Pray be seated, will you not?"

"I am restless tonight, do you mind if I stand about and smoke? The night calls to me, but I do n—know just what the message is."

"Is that not its chief charm—that we do not understand?"

He turned toward her.

"You will pardon me if I appear personal, but you seem to be so different—a superior type of person. Your note told me as much. The quotation was a lovely prose-poem. Your name—Nahuil—it puzzles me. Pardon me for being so dirc.', but you are Hawaiian? Or can it be that other bloods are in your veins—your name, Eugenie, let us say?"

He never knew — then—how much depended on the answer. In after years he knew that this was the turning point in his life.

"I am French. My father was an officer on one of the French boats which used to make this port. He named me Eugenie. At one time he placed great hopes in me." Her voice held a haunting note to it.

"I never think of the name Eugenie without associating it with empresses—Eugenie, regal and poised. Yes, your father was right."

"You are very kind." She smiled a slow response.

"Tell me something about yourself." The question came from Don Carlos' lips impulsively. He seated himself beside her.

From generalities to personalities —a quick descent.

"Do you mind if I place this hibiscus on the other side of your face? It is so huge that it hides your profile from me?"

"Ah! No! Not on that side." Alarm was in her voice. "The Hawaiian custom states that none but the unwed maiden may wear the love flower behind the left ear."

"But you have just told me that you were French." He could not understand the terror in her voice.

"You are—married?"

"Yes—to a full-blooded Hawaiian, David Nahuil. You have met him my friend."

Dead silence greeted her remark. Don Carlos held his breath.

What Has Happened So Far

Don Carlos Whiting goes to Hawaii after he discovers that his wife, Eve, is carrying on an affair with George Phillips, a neighbor. On landing he is accosted by David Nahuil, who offers him $2000 for delivering a black bag. He sees Eugenie, Nahuil's wife, who fascinated him. Phillips carries on his suit for Eve's love, but quarreling brings unhappiness. Don Carlos meets Selma Wilson, crippled mother of an unusual family, which includes a daughter, Ruth. The latter plans a companionate marriage with Al Harding, much to the disgust of her father, Big Tim Wilson. A woman drops a letter at Don's feet. It contains an invitation to meet her. The same day Nahuil orders him to carry the black bag again. He delivers the package and arrives home in safety.

Man Madness by MAY CHRISTIE

A SIX-DAY STORY

Chicago who's got him his about his new typewriter — Jimmie's got take advantage of his being here.

Irma said gentlf I were a Kitty, I shouldn't'ner in the evenings for him. could step s on my own!"

As she stood fully incite Kitty to "step outsit" and the by give Jimmie Ben tit for a whole series thoughts we flashing through sle's brain.

It was her mode turn eve thing in life to hown gain.

She really had li pity for Kitty. Vina Byrne wa much ma formidable rival in her background and her clothes and looks and her career.

But it was just that career—and the furtherance thereof—that had removed Vina from Jimmie Barron's orbit. Vina was in Milan and would remain in Italy, studying her singing, for several months.

Now—with the young man's fancying away from Kitty and the more important rival a few odd thousands of miles off—was Irma's opportunity to butt right in.

To be married to a handsome, well-mannared, rising young man whose brains would one day make him rich and famous . . . that wasn't too lowly a goal, was it?

Apart from all these considerations, however, Irma wanted Jimmie Barron.

Her green eyes now on Kitty's face, she said, ever so sweetly and sympathetically:

"Give him a little of his own medicine, Kitty. Show yourself equally indifferent. Whatever you do, don't call him up or let him think you're moping. Go out with other men . . . that'll reach his eyes, all righty . . . and the first thing you know he'll be back at your feet."

"You're all wrong about Jimmie," said Kitty Grayson, proudly, tilting her chin and looking directly at Irma. "Instead of doubting the truth of what he tells me, and trying to take a mean advantage of him, I think all the more of him for sticking to his work, even though it does mean I can't see him as often."

Irma said, slowly: "You take a tip from me and do as I say. I've oceans of experience. If Jimmie Barron calls you up to make a date, be cool, friendly but inaccessible. Tell him you're very sorry, but you're already booked. That'll pique him—make him keener."

Irma proceeded, watching her effect: "He's a nice chap—Jimmie —but no little tin god, you know. And he did get himself talked about with Vina Byrne. Did it never occur to you that now that she's away, he might be just filling in time with you?"

Then, as Kitty made a move to go back to her desk, Irma fell into step with her. She said, quickly: "I'm only talking for your own good; you'll offend him, and he may not ring up again for days. But I'll guarantee that before a week's over, you'll have a wonderful evening in his company—"

"How so?"

"I'll see to that. I promised him I'd arrange a party. And I promise I'll fix everything so you and he can be together—and you'll find he's all the keener if you do as I say."

Ten minutes later, the phone rang. She jumped in her seat. "Hello. Yes. Yes. This is Kitty."

Irma observed her sudden pallor, the shaking of the hand that held the ear-piece, the muffled voice.

"Now—we'll see—" Irma told herself.

Straining her ears she heard Kitty assure someone at the end of the wire that it was quite impossible to accompany him that evening for a bite of dinner . . . oh, she quite understood he would have to leave her immediately after . . . it wasn't that . . . oh, no . . . but she had another date tonight.

Irma, with a Mona-Lisa smile, listened and watched. "I knew she would overdo it!" she said to herself.

When Kitty finally hung up the receiver her cheeks were as white as paper and her hands were shaking. There was a piteous, martyred look on her young face.

"That was Jimmie," she breathed.

Irma clapped her hands.

"Brave girl. You're on the right track. You watch how quickly he'll ring back."

He didn't. And as the afternoon wore away Kitty's spirits went down to zero.

Next day there was no word from him. Irma noticed her that he was merely brooding . .

Kitty had never felt more wretched. She alternated between hope and despair.

As she came out of the big office building with Irma, Frank Hinkler's car was drawn up at the curb.

"Jump in, girls." Before Kitty had time to draw back, he had fairly pushed her and Irma into the machine.

And as they turned into Fifth Ave. he eyed Kitty, jovially: "This is a better way of going home than fighting one's way into the subway, eh?"

So he was going to drive her to Jackson Heights. That was kind of Mr. Hinkler. Kitty was tired and heartsore and she made no protest.

Kitty leaned back in Hinkler's car. She was so absorbed in her own perplexities that for a time she didn't even notice where she was going.

Had she offended Jimmie Barron yesterday, that he had not called her up today? Was it possible that he had found out about her subterfuge?

Was Irma really and truly the friend she pretended to be?

After a time the fresh air roused her, so that she sat up a little and opened her eyes.

She got a surprise. They were on the wrong road . . .

She spoke to Irma, who was chattering in great good spirits with Frank.

"That's all right, baby. On an evening like this there's no hurry for getting you home to the old folks."

Then I must telephone them and ask mother to keep supper for me." Kitty moved uneasily.

"Right-o. But you've a good hour yet before that's necessary."

"I'd rather do it now."

But when the car pulled up, it was Irma who scrambled out.

"You stay with Frank. I'll give the message. I'll tell the old folks you're with me, and you'll be home around 9 o'clock."

She disappeared into a booth in a cigar store and very shortly was back.

"Everything's all right."

But not for one moment could Kitty get Jimmie out of her head.

Could a man be in love with two girls at the same time?

Vina was beautiful. Cultured. Traveled. She had a fine home—and a background.

They were skimming along the Connecticut roads before she came out of her reverie.

When they reached Frank's bungalow, she made no demur about getting out of the machine and followed Irma into the low-raftered lounge and mechanically seated herself.

He went straight to the sideboard and got out the bottles.

"Just a little pick-up for us all. Miss Kitty, you won't hold out against a cocktail?"

"Sorry we don't have any ice." Frank handed her the beverage.

It had a pleasant, sweetish taste. She drank it rather quickly.

He refilled her glass. "Come. It was only a small one."

She yielded. She mustn't let Irma think she was upset because she hadn't seen Jimmie Barron. . .

The low-raftered room, the man and the girl before her, seemed to be twisting and turning . . . and in her ears there was a loud pounding. . . .

Kitty leaned back on Frank Hinkler's sofa, while the room and her host and Irma seemed to be whirling up and down! She was very much ashamed . . . she oughtn't to have touched those cocktails . . . this was the sort of thing that happened to girls in story-books when they took a drink . . . but she had never imagined that it could come to herself . . . Kitty Grayson!

"I'm a bit giddy. I—I'll go—" Kitty got to her feet, then quickly put out a hand to grope for the arm of the sofa, and suddenly sat down again. "I feel—awfully queer—"

Kitty put a hand to her forehead. This horrible dizziness!

"The drinks . . . I'm not accustomed . . . you know, Irma."

"But only two, Kitty? And you didn't even finish the second one . . ."

"I—know. I—I feel awful, Irma."

"Keep still and it'll pass off."

Thereafter Kitty remembered not one thing.

"I'm going right to the telephone and call a doctor!" And Irma made three quick strides towards the instrument.

But Frank intercepted her.

"Don't be a complete fool," he hissed. "If you and she don't want to get your names into the papers and both lose your jobs, you'd better keep quiet." And he caught Irma by the arm and whirled her about.

At half past nine, when Kitty's eyes flew open, Irma was fully marked—was the only sound in the eerily quiet house, she said briefly to Frank:

"Here, give me a hand. We'd better get her upstairs and into a bed."

On the Queen Anne bed that had cost Frank Hinkler a small fortune, Irma lay by the side of Kitty and stared with meditative eyes toward a window through which the early rays of the morning sun were slanting.

A nice kettle of fish!

But morning brought meditation with it. How best could she transmute this stupid occurrence to her own profit.

Although she had done her duty by Kitty in sticking to her all night, and keeping watch over her, she wouldn't let the girl know the extent of her watchfulness.

She would thus establish a hold over Kitty. . . .

Power could work wonders. To have something "on" Kitty mean that she—Irma—had a lever wherewith to force her to her wishes.

She swung her feet over the edge of the bed, tiptoed to the door in her stockinged feet, and listened intently.

In a few moments she heard a door open and Frank go along the passage and descend the stairs. Irma cautiously opened her door and crept along to the top of the staircase.

Curiosity prompted her, and a certain pleasure she took in eavesdropping.

Frank phoned in a quick, staccato voice.

And as she hearkened to the one-sided conversation and, growing bolder, then hung over the balustrade from a dark corner, she could both see and hear Frank getting more nervous and excited.

"Good Lord, man! Is it true? You say they're wise to it? What's that? Sh, sh—careful boy! Easy! You're on a public wire!"

Frank Hinkler dropped his voice. "We've got to unload the stuff, I tell you. It'll mean a cool thirty thousand. What's that you're saying? Haven't you got a gun on you, your poor boob?"

And Irma, her ears strained to hear more, was saying to herself: "Bootlegging! Heavens! Is it possible that Frank——"

So here was the evil source of Frank's money. Lavish spender as he invariably was and without any apparent source of income, beyond his flutters on the market and his mysterious "deals," here was the fount of his wealth and, as far as the law was concerned, his "heel of Achilles!"

Frank was a member of the notorious bootlegging ring operating in New York City!

As Frank hung up the receiver, Irma—her brain working with lightning rapidity and her resolution taken—deliberately came into view.

She must let Frank understand—at once—that SHE KNEW!

Lack of courage was not her weak feature.

But the look in his eyes when he sighted her at the top of the staircase was certainly alarming.

"You —!"

As though she hadn't heard his oath, she ran lightly and swiftly down to him. Get it over quick . . . flatter him by pretence of admiring his cleverness . . . get into his good graces as soon as possible . . .

He was glaring at her, like an animal at bay, his lips drawn back from his teeth in an ugly snarl.

"Don't be angry with me, dear. I woke up in a fright and heard you talking and came along to find you——"

"What did you hear?" The words were rapped out like a shot from a pistol.

She went straight up to him. She looked directly into his furious suspicious eyes.

"I heard enough to know you're twenty times as smart a fellow as I thought you, Frank."

"Don't kid!" He caught her by the arm and the pressure of his fingers digging into her flesh was a swift agony.

But the smile did not fade from Irma's mouth.

"No need to get excited. I'm not kidding. This is just a secret between you and me. And I'm admiring you, Frank. Honest to goodness I never thought—clever chap that you are—that you had it in you!"

Her words had a ring of sincerity. He drew a short, sharp breath, his eyes never leaving her face for one instant.

"If you double-cross me, so help me, I'll kill you!"

"Sit down. You and me'll have this thing out!"

"Burn thing, old dear." The frank smile widened. Irma sank on the settee beside him, murmured: "Since a little knowledge is proverbially dangerous, why don't you come across and let me in on the whole secret?"

He gave a queer little laugh. "You're a cool one, Irma!"

"Well, don't you admire me for it? With my abilities and level-headedness, why don't you take me into the firm as your partner?"

"You heard everything, you say? But you couldn't have!"

She went on, in the same disarmingly direct manner: "I can't see anything so terrible in the game, Frank, except that the law's agin' it! It takes a lot of nerve and brains, of course, and the men with the one so often haven't got the other, more's the pity. That's where YOU score . . ."—and she looked into his face with a wide-eyed admiration that could not fail to flatter him.

His fears began to be allayed. Irma was fond of him.

It would be foolish to quarrel with her, now she knew as much as she did. . .

He took a swift, side-long look at her, as though to catch some fleeting expression that might belie her apparently frank words.

But there was nothing of the sort on Irma's eager countenance.

He drew a deep breath of relief. She was a pal—a partner. His secret was safe in her slim, white hands.

• • •

"For mercy's sake, wake up, Kitty, dear!"

Irma, after a prolonged tete-a-tete with Frank had a timely recollection that if Kitty and she were to catch the 8 o'clock train to New York and the office, they had better hurry.

Kitty sat up in the strange room, in the Queen Anne bed, and rubbed her eyes.

"Irma! Where am I? What on earth's happened?"

In a few terse words, Irma recounted the horrible situation!

"Drunk? I? Oh, never! Oh, Irma, don't frighten me! How—how on earth did I get into this room last night?"

"Don't ask me!" The shrug of Irma's shoulders spoke volumes. "You're in Frank's bedroom. I tell you you'd a couple of drinks—don't you remember?—and you lay on the settee downstairs and wouldn't go home with me, and finally I had to go off to an important engagement I had, and I left you with Frank. I must say this was an air of outraged righteousness—"I shouldn't have budged one inch had I known you were going to stay here all night! I'd have remained right in the house with you. But Frank promised me faithfully he'd take you off in his car once you were pulled round a bit—"

"You went away?" repeated Kitty vaguely. Her head felt stupid and "dopey." "And now you've come back?"

"All the way from New York on the first train out, to fetch you. I was uneasy, and I called Frank on the phone—"

Kitty put one foot over the edge of the bed and stammered: "Oh, Irma, what—how—oh, I can't remember . . . how did I come to take off my clothes?"

Irma was silent, giving her a long, queer, searching look. Irma's silence filled Kitty with terror and foreboding.

She murmured piteously: "Oh, Irma, I don't remember anything! You say I've been here all night . . . father and mother will be frantic about me. . ."

Responded the other, coolly: "You can thank your lucky stars I telephoned them. I knew you were in no fit condition to land back in the family dove-cot, so I left instructions with Frank to bring you right back to my little flat in Greenwich Village. I called your mother at a quarter of ten last night and said you had had a headache and was going to stay in town and spend the night with me!"

THE NEW SILENT KELVINATOR

automatically keeps your foods as safe at home as they were kept in the market

THE modern merchant from whom you buy your foods realizes the importance of keeping them fresh and wholesome until they are sold. For this purpose he provides constant low temperatures by electric refrigeration . . . probably Kelvinator refrigeration.

Doesn't it seem just as reasonable that you should give them the same good care . . . holding all their wholesome goodness until they are eaten?

The New Silent Kelvinator provides that steady, constant low temperature year in and year out. It is entirely automatic, always operating silently without attention or regulation on your part.

Come in and see it today. It is most reasonable in cost and may be installed immediately on Kelvinator's attractive ReDisCo monthly budget plan.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

U. S. Censor Sillier Than "Peanut Pusher"

Proboscis-pushing of a peanut up Pike's Peak is under way to the accompaniment of a nation's chuckles.

Surely, one thinks, here is the epitome of all our silliness; dance marathons, bunion derbies and flagpole sittings condensed in the supreme expression of the silly ideas that must have origin in soul-wearing inhibitions.

On hands and knees, a man pushes with the end of his nose a peanut up that steep grade made famous by automobile advertising. We wonder what kind of a nose is the best nose for pushing a peanut up Pike's Peak. We wonder whether it will not hereafter be Pike's Beak. We wonder how those double-barreled peanuts with right-angles about the midriff can be made to perform up-hill.

Could anything be sillier? Could anything be more absurd?

Nothing, perhaps, except the action of customs officials who seized in Boston thirteen copies of an English translation of Voltaire's "Candide," one of the classics of all literature.

"Candide," rules the United States Treasury Department, is "improper" and therefore should be denied importation privileges.

That, we are afraid, is several degrees sillier than would be the spectacle of a thousand men pushing with their noses a thousand peanuts up Pike's Peak.

The one is the absurd act of the individual. The other is the absurd, official act of Government, setting a precedent which has no basis either in moral right or common sense.

The fact that "Candide" is on the required reading list of every large university in the country affects no whit the decision of the Treasury Department official who read the book, found it immoral and ordered it seized. Perhaps he never had heard of it before. Perhaps he never heard of Voltaire.

If the average citizen wants an English translation of "Candide" he has merely to step into the nearest bookstore and buy one from stock. "But," says the Treasury Department, "you can't import such a volume."

So is taken another step in Government censorship of our beauty, our art, our individual morals and our intellectual freedom. Century-old classics are taboo, but newspapers controlled by privilege-seeking private interests may feed censored and distorted news to a public not quite as gullible as they believe.

But we may be wrong. Noses pushing peanuts up Pike's Peak provide a spectacle merely silly. This other is serious as well. And when a thing becomes serious it may cease entirely to be absurd.

Guard Bay State Against Possible Film Horror

A similar tragedy to that which occurred recently in Cleveland is, without doubt, possible in Massachusetts, Dr. C. P. Sylvester, retiring president, tells the Massachusetts Society of Examining Physicians.

Let us take immediate steps to remove that possibility.

Until the Cleveland horror, few of us ever had considered the danger from deadly gases released by burning X-ray films. There are both inflammable and non-inflammable films available. The latter are more expensive, and the result is that inflammable films are in use and in storage in many institutions within this state.

Safeguarding legislation will be promptly passed in Ohio, Dr. Sylvester forecasts.

Will we benefit by the example of the Cleveland tragedy or must we wait until a similar disaster claims the lives of those closer to our own?

New Traffic Head Should Have Aid of Public

William A. Fisher, our new traffic commissioner, tackles a man's size job in his attempt to wrest order out of the chaos an ever-increasing number of automobiles has brought to our narrow downtown streets. He appears both competent and eager to do the job.

We cannot expect to avoid congestion; we may hope only to minimize it. Nor can the element of danger be entirely excluded.

The new commissioner has a full realization of all the difficulties to be encountered in his job. And he knows that even strict enforcement of reasonable and practical regulations will not solve the problem without the co-operation of the public, in its walking and driving units.

For this co-operation he asks, and the Boston Evening American adds its, "Please!"

Buy a Poppy Tomorrow

Again tomorrow on Greater Boston streets will be sold imitation poppies made by disabled veterans in our hospitals. It is an annual reminder that the years that have passed since the guns were stilled have failed to bring physical and mental peace to many who fought.

The general public has little personal contact with the disabled veterans. If the one understood the needs of the other, one such poppy drive as we have tomorrow would result in sufficient funds to carry on for several years the excellent work of the veterans' organizations.

N. E. Industries Prepared

Preparedness of New England industry for mobilization in time of war is pledged by the officers of the Boston Quartermasters' Depot.

This nation does not want war and does not expect war. God forbid that the time ever comes again when we will find it necessary to go to war!

But if that time does arrive, may our army, our navy and our air units be as well prepared to meet the test as will be our New England industry.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 24—Thoughts while strolling: Everything is blamed on the sinus this season. It used to be infected teeth.

George Gershwin's extraordinarily long fingers. Chorus boy types who manage tea rooms. Child's with soft drink counters. Too many comedians trying to imitate Bert Lahr.

Gordon Rentschler, a Hamilton, O., boy, who made good in the city. Morris Gest is aging. But aren't we all? They say Rudy Vallee's first name is Hubert. Vaudeville "sister acts" wrestling trays during the summer loaf. Elderly women in tight-fitting turbans who wear long drop earrings. And smoke cigarettes in long holders.

Spatted boulevardiers who carry yellow gloves. Chorus girls in water snake skin shoes. Hope Williams, a Social Registerite, a "vow" in a play of society manners—if any. Pitt B. Hand. Those hard luck guys who haven't time to change from golf clothes for the matinee. Karl Hoblitzel, the vaudeville king of the South.

Ethel Watters who is the current Florence Mills. Sign: "What's the Matter With the Theater?" Why go into that? The fellow with Frans Josef whiskers and Tyrolean hat who peddles papers on 45th st. Ted Cook, the cock-eyed humorist, from Los Angeles, and his tommyish chapeau. Clifton Webb's mustache.

All the summer novels trying to be whimsical and are just too silly. Carl Van Vechten's snow-white hair and violet blue eyes. And what an idol up Harlem way. Ladies with hang-overs trying to be grand-dame-ish. The lorgnette hides the spare tires. Bruce Reynolds' canary-toned vest.

Radios should stop plugging worthless stocks. No, but I almost did. Toscanini's double, who runs a shoe shine stand. Billiard matches taking on the lah-de-lah of a fox hunt. Spectators in evening clothes. No smoking during the contest. Hodgkins, my chalk! And let there be no tittering.

The plush that falls over Jersey hills after dark. Like a night moth's velvet wings. Men who lounge against pier crates—and stare out to sea. Women who sit in tenement windows, numb to all emotions. Chorines who sit on fire escapes to await their cue. Not so numb, but terribly—but never mind.

There is a chance here, my dears, in this poignant yelp from the desperate young stranger in the city who special delivers: "If you can find a young girl in this town who does not show you, five minutes after introduction, she has a patent cigarette lighter, I'll marry her right off." He's a country joke. "Right off" is the tipoff.

Frank Harris, the veteran writer, while in America recently is reported to have written George Bernard Shaw he had sold ons of Shaw's autographed letters for $100. Shaw immediately wrote him a dozen other letters, and Harris, the story goes, found a market for them. The fund went to a charity.

For a charity church sale in a Texas whistle stop, a committee went to sundry writers for their autographs to auction off. I am informed that one, who shall be nameless on account of the slight esteem in which he is held in Gallipolis, O., went to the highest bidder for 10 cents.

A new parlor game, now that pearl-cake and pearl-handled revolver shootings have gone out along aristocratic Park ave., is writing epitaphs. Each guest is given a pad and pencil to scribble a tombstone notice for anyone he desires. Here is one, for instance, read the other evening: "Andrew Volstead. Born' 18—. Died 19—. Not that it matters." But one attributed to Dorothy Parker is my favorite. It reads: "Excuse my dust!"

"We sent you two invitations," writes a rather indignant gentleman "to inspect our interior decorating school. You have replied to neither. You do not have to come, but you can at least be courteous. You are not the only columnist in town."

We are sorry but we don't go around much anymore. But you must come over to see us—and bring your sewing.

He is one of those fellows who when he sits down spreads out like batter cake. In a theater the other evening the lady next to him endured the crowding as long as possible and then let him have about a quarter of the business end of a brooch pin. Then she gathered up her doll rags and went on home, while many of us around her suppressed a rousing cheer.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

It is something of a problem these days, to know what to give the June bride.

Bookends and console sets, bridge lamps and card-table sets were all once perfectly good guesses and sent the giver a lot of mental effort, not to say brain-fag.

But now you never know what morning you are going to wake up and read in the papers that your charming little love-token has been used over the bride's head as a persuasive argument in a honeymoon battle and is "Exhibit A" in a divorce case or a murder trial.

Twice recently book-ends have been used by impetuous bridegrooms to batter reason into the young wife's head, and once a bootiress on the skull was the bride's forcible answer to her husband's argument.

After you have done a week's hard shopping to find something to brighten up the love nest, it is a shock to learn that the silver carving knife with the beautifully engraved handle has served only as a handy weapon with which to drive home a point on the bride's chin.

Or that one of the candlesticks you so tenderly selected has been sent over the bridegroom's head after a gay drinking party.

These modern young folks are SO impetuous! And they insist on "expressing themselves" with whatever happens to be handiest.

Avoid sewing baskets with scissors, Mina vases, fire irons, brass images, heavy crockery, portable lamps and all things throwable. Also silver pocket flasks and cocktail glasses, because that's how most of the heavy fighting starts.

It is probably safest to give the romantic young things something soft that can be folded up, such as Chinese embroideries, wall tapestries, silk comforters and satin throws for the chaise longue. ANYTHING that they can't HIT each other with!

Above all things, steer shy of BOOK-ENDS, which seem to be supplanting window sashes as popular weapons in domestic differences.

Honeymoons appear to be getting shorter and shorter and more and more violent with every edition of the newspapers. It seems almost foolish to waste money on a wedding present which the bride and groom will be proud to display on their golden wedding anniversary —because by that time they won't even know each other's telephone numbers.

I have always wondered what wedding presents were FOR, anyhow. The average young married pair spend half their lives trying to live up to their wedding gifts—and the other half trying to live them DOWN. But perhaps the Young Moderns have solved the problem. Wedding gifts are to throw at each other. You don't care how you break them!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE magpie is a peculiar bird.

It has an insatiable desire to hoard junk in its nest.

It will be attracted by any foolish trifle and waste great time and energy in securing it and storing it away. Bits of metal, scraps of cloth, the key to a sardine can, they are all treasure-trove to the magpie.

This must in time result disastrously for the magpie as the accumulations mount. I suppose many a foolish bird has awakened too late to find that it has actually accumulated itself out of a home!

But why look with derision on the poor magpie? Many of us humans, who should know better, do exactly the same thing. We may not accumulate sardine can keys or bottle tops, but we do gather and hoard much more pestiferous junk in our minds and wreck our lives thereby.

Recently one of my friends quarreled with me violently.

We had worked together for many years, and I had thought the combination a happy one. But she, it seems, had felt quite otherwise.

All through those years she had been accumulating an amazing pile of grudges against me. I don't blame her for that. I am a most exasperating person. But I was surprised to find what a tremendous litter she had stored up.

Incidents dating back for four or five years, which I had entirely forgotten—thoughtless little words and deeds which might have been laughed off in a second if she had let me know her hurt—scraps of carelessness, bits of unfairness—all of them she had seized upon, magpie-like, and hoarded until the bulk of their malice became too much for her and she left me, after hurling the whole accumulation.

Now, here's the sad part of it—my friend was a talented woman, with many lovable qualities. She needed her situation with me. She could so easily have made of it a wide and pleasant nest in life. But instead she had indulged this habit of collecting trash and storing it away in her mind, with the result that she crowded out all happier and more profitable reactions.

Until, like the magpie, she accumulated herself out of a home!

It's a great pity—yet we all do the same thing to a greater or less degree.

How would YOU feel if the contents of YOUR mind were suddenly tumbled out for all the world to see?

I know how I'D feel—I'D feel like thirty cents.

The amount of old tin cans and busted glass I have stored in my system—Well, you'd be surprised!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

LET us be true and leave each weak deceit outside the shining circle of our love, lest, like the snake in Eden's blest retreat, it mar the paradise wherein we rove. Love can forgive: with patience it can bear the thoughtless deed, the cruel word or look: it can be nourished on most meager fare, ignore affronts that pride would never brook.

Love can forget: its hopes so brave today can flourish where but yesterday hope died, and falsity alone can steal away the strength that casts all other bars aside. Let us keep faith, for when that white flame dies love's self along with it in ashes lies!

The man who joins a golf club is foolish. All you need is a friend who likes company in a bunker.

He invites you out to play on his home grounds, and you move in, bag, baggage and divots.

After he discovers that your tee slap makes his slice almost look straight, there is nothing more for him to do but to get you a two-weeks diploma, a golf-up and non-assessible, with all the emoluments thereof.

After you have exhausted those 14 days of squatter sovereignty you pack up your borrowed clubs and move on to your next friend and the adjoining links.

A golfer is a somber individual who takes the game seriously as the fairway. He is a gloomy anachronism who is tangled up in fresh air and ambushed by sunlight.

The fact that there are 288 links in the metropolitan hospital area indicates that the suburbs are being improved more by digging than by building.

While you are expected to play some golf on a guest card, the main idea is to get free showerbaths, towels, soap, masseges, your shoes shined and to accumulate a big bill of refreshments that have been chemically analyzed.

While you are gussting about the suburbs your host pays all your bills. His clubhouse is your castle. When it comes to paying for anything, a guest card is better than an exemption blank in 1917.

It takes 11 years to play all the links around Manhattan, and a mooching foursome has no worry about the immediate future.

When the mooching foursome is eating and the dinner checks arrive it always stands at a respectable distance while the host is on the green.

When the 11 years have been chewed up the mooching four, some is not without resources.

It can demand another 11 years of invitations under winter rules.

Smacking a divot into the great unknown is an economical form of landscape gardening if you know how to work the gadgets.

Think of the outdoor exhilaration of getting 23 years of exclusive niblicking at the expense of a couple of guys who like company. It's cheaper to be a hermit,

At a recent dinner of the St. Andrews Golfing Syndicate the venerable and bearded pards of that ancient mob were humbled and dismayed when the toastmaster pinned a medal on our lapel.

It was only then that the ancestors of the caddies realized that we were the oldest guest in the club.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

There will be no true freedom without virtue, no true science without religion, no true industry without the fear of God and love to your fellow-citizens.

—Kingsley.

Reading without thinking may indeed make a rich common-place, but 'twill never make a clear head.

—Norris.

I reckon there's more things told than are true,
And more things true than are told.

—Kipling.
